PREFACE.

THE society is indebted to the kindness of George Eltweed Pomeroy, Esq., of Toledo, Ohio, in allowing facsimiles of Colonel Seth Pomeroy's commission and muster roll. Also to W. P. Cutter, Esq., librarian of the Forbes Library, Northampton, where the originals have been recently deposited.

Our fellow member, Captain William Lithgow Willey, is the fortunate possessor of a very fine copy of Blodget's Plan of the Battle of Lake George, which he placed at our disposal for reproduction. It is one of the earliest impressions of the plate, which was probably engraved by Thomas Johnston in his little shop on the north side of Faneuil Hall.

The following is an advertisement of the project:

"THIS DAY PUBLISH'D

And Sold by SAMUEL BLODGET, at the South End of Boston, near the Sign of the Lamb, and opposite to Capt. Smith's.

A prospective PLAN of 2 of the Engagements the English had with the French at Lake-George on the 8th of September 1755; exhibiting to the Eye a very lively as well as just Representation of them; together with Part of the Lake, the Camp, the Situation of each Regiment, with the Disadvantages attending them: The appearance of the Canadians, Indians and Regulars, as they made their Approach to the Breast Work; the Form of the Land and the Enemy; together with the Advantage they had in their Ambuscade against Col. Williams. As also a PLAN of Hudson's-River from New York to Albany; with such Marks as will be of great Service to Navigation: Likewise the River and Waggon Road from Albany to Lake George; together with a Plan and Situation of each of the Forts that have been lately built. All which is carefully and neatly struck off from a large Copper Plate.

N. B. There will be sold with each Plan a printed Pamphlet with Explanatory Notes, containing a full tho' short History of that Important Affair from the Beginning to the End of it.

☞ The above MAP together with the Pamphlets, may be had of the Printers hereof."

(The Boston Gazette or Country Journal, 22 Dec., 1755.)

Blodget was for many years a trader or merchant in the town of Boston.

The reproduction of the pamphlet is made from an original in the library of the Boston Athenæum through the courtesy of Mr. Charles K. Bolton.

CONSTITUTION OF THE GENERAL SOCIETY.

PREAMBLE.

WHEREAS, it is desirable that there should be adequate celebrations commemorative of the events of Colonial history happening from the settlement of Jamestown, Va., May 13, 1607, to the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775,

THEREFORE, The Society of Colonial Wars has been instituted to perpetuate the memory of those events, and of the men who in military, naval, and civil positions of high trust and responsibility, by their acts or counsel, assisted in the establishment, defence, and preservation of the American Colonies, and were in truth the founders of this nation. With this end in view, it seeks to collect and preserve manuscripts, rolls, relics, and records; to provide suitable commemorations or memorials relating to the American Colonial period; and to inspire in its members the fraternal and patriotic spirit of their forefathers, and in the community respect and reverence for those whose public services made our freedom and unity possible.

ARTICLE I.

NAME.

The Society shall be known by the name and title of the "GENERAL SOCIETY OF COLONIAL WARS."

ARTICLE II.

MEMBERSHIP.

Any male person above the age of twenty-one years, of good moral character and reputation, shall be eligible to membership in the Society of Colonial Wars, who is lineally descended in the male or female line from an ancestor:

(1) Who served as a military or naval officer, or as a soldier, sailor, or marine, or as a privateersman, under the authority of the Colonies which afterwards formed the United States, or in the forces of Great Britain which participated with those of the said Colonies in any wars in which the said Colonies were engaged, or in which they enrolled men, from the settlement of Jamestown, May 13, 1607, to the battle of Lexington, April 19, 1775; or

(2) Who held office in any of the Colonies between the dates above mentioned, either as

(a) Director-General, Vice-Director-General, or a member of the Council or legislative body in the Colony of New Netherlands;

(b) Governor, Lieutenant or Deputy Governor, Lord Proprietor, member of the King's or Governor's Council or legislative body in the Colonies of New York, New Jersey, Virginia, Pennsylvania, and Delaware;

(c) Lord Proprietor, Governor, Deputy-Governor, or member of the Council or of the legislative body in Maryland and the Carolinas;

(d) Governor, Deputy-Governor, Governor's Assistant, or Commissioner to the United Colonies of New England, or member of the Council, body of Assistants, or legislative body in any of the New England Colonies.

One collateral representative of an ancestor such as above specified shall be eligible to membership, providing there be no existing lineal descendant, and provided that such person be the oldest collateral representative in the male line of such ancestor, or has filed with the Secretary-General of the Society written renunciation from all other persons having nearer claims to representation.

No State Society shall adopt any rule of eligibility for membership in the General Society which shall admit any person not eligible for membership in the General Society.

But any State Society may, except as to members transferred from another State Society, further restrict, at its discretion, the basis of eligibility for membership in its own Society.

ARTICLE III.

GENERAL SOCIETY.

The General Society of Colonial Wars shall consist of the Societies now existing in the States of New York, Pennsylvania, Maryland, Massachusetts, Connecticut, and District of Columbia, and such other Societies as may from time to time be duly organized and authorized by the General Society.

ARTICLE VII.

POWERS OF THE GENERAL SOCIETY.

The General Society shall have sole power of action in the national as distinct from the State affairs of the organization. It shall have jurisdiction to pass upon all questions of eligibility referred to it by the Registrar-

He shall have charge of printing and publications issued by the Society. He shall give due notice of the time and place of the holding of all Courts of the Society and of the Council, and shall incorporate in said notice the names of all applicants for membership, to be voted on at said Council, and shall be present at the same. He shall keep fair and accurate records of all the proceedings and orders of the Society and of the Council, and shall give notice to each officer who may be

In his absence from any meeting the Deputy-Secretary shall act, or a Secretary pro tempore may be designated therefor.

SECTION VI.

TREASURER.

The Treasurer shall collect and keep the funds and securities of the Society, and as often as those funds shall amount to one hundred dollars they shall be deposited in some bank in the city of Boston, which shall be designated by the Council, to the credit of the Society of Colonial Wars in the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, and such funds shall be drawn thence on the checks of the Treasurer for the purpose of the Society only. Out of these funds he shall pay such sums only as may be ordered by the Society or Council or his office may require. He shall keep a true account of his receipts and payments, and at each annual meeting render the same to the Society. For the faithful performance of his duty he may be required to give such security as the Society may deem proper.

SECTION VII.

REGISTRAR.

The Registrar shall receive from the Secretary and file all the proofs upon which membership has been granted, with a list of all diplomas countersigned by him, and all documents which the Society may obtain; and he, under

They shall perform such duties as shall be prescribed by the Constitution and By-Laws, but they shall at no time be required to take any action or contract any debt for which they shall be liable. They may accept the resignation of any member of the Society. They may meet as often as required, or at the call of the Governor. Five members shall constitute a quorum for the transaction of business; at the General Court they shall submit to the Society a report of their proceedings during the past year. The Council shall have the power to drop from the roll the name of any member of the Society who shall be in arrears at least three months in payment of annual dues. If, at the end of six months, after proper notice, the dues shall yet remain unpaid, the Council, unless the delay be occasioned by absence abroad, or valid reason, shall proceed to drop such delinquent member, or members, without further notice. He may be restored to membership at any time by the Council upon his written application and the payment of all such arrears from the date when he was dropped to the date of his restoration. The Council may suspend any officer for cause, which must be reported to the Society, and action taken on the same within thirty days.

SECTION XIV.

VACANCIES AND TERMS OF OFFICE.

Whenever an officer of this Society shall die, resign, or neglect to serve, or be suspended, or be unable to perform his duties by reason of absence, sickness, or other cause, and whenever an office shall be vacant which the Society shall not have filled by an election, the Council shall have power to appoint a member to such office pro tempore, who shall act in such capacity until the Society shall elect a member to the vacant office, or until the inability due to said cause shall cease; provided, however, that the office of Governor or Secretary shall not be filled by the Council when there shall be a Deputy or Lieutenant-Governor, or Deputy-Secretary, to enter on the duties.

The Council may supply vacancies among its members under the same conditions, and should any member other than an officer be absent from three consecutive Councils of the same, his place may be declared vacant by the Council and filled by appointment until an election of a successor.

Subject to these provisions, all officers and gentlemen of the Council shall from the time of election continue in their respective offices until the next General Court, or until their successors are chosen.

SECTION XV.

The Council, after thirty days' notice to such person to substantiate his claim, and upon his failure satisfactorily to do so, may require the Secretary to erase his name from the membership list. The said person shall have a right to appeal to the Society at its next Court, or at the General Court. If the said appeal be sustained by a two-thirds vote of the members present at such Court, the said person's name shall be restored to said membership list. .

Applications shall be accompanied by proofs of eligibility, and such applications and proofs shall be referred to the Committee on Membership, who shall carefully investigate the same and report at the next meeting their recommendation thereon. Members shall be elected by ballot at a meeting of the Council after report by the Committee on Membership, but a negative vote of one in five of the ballots cast shall cause the rejection of such candidate. Payment of the initiation fee and dues, and subscription to the declaration contained in the By-Laws of the Society, shall be a prerequisite of membership.

Every applicant for membership shall declare upon honor that he has not failed of admission in any other State Society, and that he will use his best efforts to promote the purposes of the Society and will observe the Constitution and By-Laws of the same.

The proceedings of the Committee shall be secret and confidential; and a candidate who has been rejected by the Council shall be ineligible for membership for a space of one year from date of rejection, except upon the unanimous vote of the Committee.

The Committee shall have power to make By-Laws for its government, and for other purposes not inconsistent with the Constitution or By-Laws of the Society.

SECTION XIX.

The Council shall give reasonable notice of such charges, and afford such member reasonable opportunity to be heard and refute the same. The Council, after hearing such charges, may recommend to the Society the expulsion or suspension of such member, and if the recommendation of the Council be adopted by a majority vote of the members of the Society present at such Court, he shall be so expelled or suspended, and the insignia of said member shall thereupon be returned to the Treasurer of the Society, and his rights therein shall be extinguished or suspended. The Treasurer shall refund to the said member the amount paid for the said insignia.

On Wednesday at 10 A.M. a visit was paid the Governor of the Commonwealth at the State House. At 11 the General Assembly was organized at Faneuil Hall, and at 1.30 a luncheon was served, the business being resumed at 2.30.

In the afternoon, after the adjournment, many delegates availed themselves of the kind invitation of Professor Sargent and visited his fine estate in Brookline.

In the evening a reception was held at the Somerset by the State Society to the General Officers, Delegates, members, and ladies.

Thursday at 10 A.M. one hundred and twenty-five Delegates, members, and ladies went by special train to Concord. Carriages were then taken to view the places of interest in that town, and then the party went by train to Lexington, where lunch was served at the Old Belfry Club, and later places of historic interest in Lexington were visited.

Friday a party of one hundred and forty went by special train to Plymouth. Lunch was served in the Armory of the Standish Guards, and after all the places of note were seen in Plymouth, a portion of the party visited Duxbury at the invitation of Dr. Myles Standish.

SOCIETY OF COLONIAL WARS
IN THE COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS,
BOSTON, May 29, 1902.

To the Members: The Governor of the Massachusetts Society desires to congratulate the members upon the great success which attended the recent meeting of the General Assembly in this city. It was an event which will be long remembered, and cannot fail to add to the dignity and good name of the Society in this community.

Our visitors were enthusiastic in their appreciation of our hospitality, and our efforts for their entertainment. Nothing occurred to mar our plans, and even nature smiled upon us with four beautiful spring days.

The Governor desires to thank every member who in any way contributed to the happy result. He would express his gratitude to all the members of the several committees. He would especially record his indebtedness to one hundred and eighty-seven members who contributed $2,250, which sum of money enabled the committees to plan upon a liberal scale. This money, added to that already in the treasury, will enable us to meet all expenses without encroaching upon the Life Membership Fund of $2,600.

We cannot forget the cordial reception by His Excellency Governor Crane, and the generous spirit in which we were met by the citizens of Concord, Lexington, and Plymouth. The interest shown by Mr. Gleason, of Hotel Somerset, and the decorators, Mr. Galvin and Messrs. Lamprell and Marble, is worthy of mention. We are indebted to the Boston press for appreciative records of our proceedings. While members of our committees did what they could, the burden of responsibility and detail, as is usual in such cases, rested upon a very few active members, and your Governor hereby records his special obligations and thanks to the following gentlemen for whose constant interest and devotion, sound judgment, and good taste the Society owes its grateful thanks. The work could not have been better done.

Joseph Grafton Minot, Lieut.-Governor; Edward Webster McGlenen, Secretary; Walter Kendall Watkins, Genealogist; Abijah Thompson, Treasurer; Edwin Sanford Crandon, Registrar; John Anthony Remick, Edward Tobey Barker, Charles Gurley Saunders, Joshua Bennett Holden, Francis Henry Appleton, Charles Lewis Hutchins, Albert Alonzo Folsom.

We have regretted the absence of the Deputy Governor, Capt. Joseph Giles Eaton, U.S.N., in command of the "Oregon" on the Pacific Coast; and a letter recently received from him expresses his own great disappointment, as he had fully expected to be present with us.

For myself, gentlemen of the Society, you will permit me to add that I have been greatly honored in being your representative during the notable meeting of the General Assembly in Boston, and I thank one and all for their interest in the occasion.

A. J. C. SOWDON,
Governor.

THE CHARTER AND THE MEN.

[Read before the Society by HORACE E. WARE, October 29, 1901.]

IN the early part of the 17th century there began in the British Islands, principally in England, the vigorous development of those commercial companies and colonizing movements which have done so much in spreading civilization and enlightenment over the earth.

Those companies were generally organized under the authority of a royal charter constituting the projectors of the enterprise and their associates a corporation, granting them tracts of territory, monopolies of trade or otherwise, and prescribing the form of corporate management, frequently clothing the corporation and its officers with some political powers. As a rule the companies had their headquarters and meetings somewhere in England, generally in London. I shall make reference to some of the charters of these companies, and shall call especial attention to a peculiarity in the charter of the Massachusetts Bay Company, being the absence of any provision therein requiring the corporation, or its board of government, to reside, so to speak, in England.

I would also, among other things, ask your consideration of some of the intentions of the founders of the Massachusetts Colony, and of some of the far-reaching consequences resulting from their acts, particularly from their action in transferring the charter and government of the Company from England to its territory here in New England.

I now call your attention to the first Charter of Virginia. This Charter was granted by King James the First under date of April 10, 1606.

Under that instrument Sir Thomas Gates and certain others named, of London, and all such others as were or should be joined unto them, were to be called the First Colony; and Thomas Hanham and certain others named and all such others of Plymouth or elsewhere as were or should be joined unto them, were to be called the Second Colony. The First Colony was empowered to make their first settlement at any place upon the coast of America between 34° and 41° of North latitude; and the Second Colony was empowered to make their first settlement at any place upon that coast between 38° and 45° of North latitude.¹

The territory of each Colony was to extend one hundred miles along the coast and one hundred miles into the interior from every part of the coast line, — said coast line to measure fifty miles to the Northward and fifty miles to the Southward of the first settlement.

Neither Colony was to make their first settlement within one hundred miles of the place of the settlement which the other Colony might first have located. The reason for this provision was that under the provisions of the Charter just mentioned, either Colony might make its first settlement between 38° and 41° of latitude.

Each Colony was to have a council to order matters, ¹The position on the coast of the degrees of latitude named may be briefly stated as follows: 34° is slightly south of Wilmington, N.C.; 41° is slightly north of New York City; 38° is at the boundary between Maryland and Virginia; and 45° is slightly south of St. John, New Brunswick.

etc., to or within such Colony, according to laws, ordinances, and instructions to be given by the king. Each of these two councils was to consist of thirteen persons to be ordained, made and removed from time to time as directed in said instructions.

The Charter further provided that there should be a council established "here in England," to consist of thirteen persons to be appointed by the King, to be called "Our Council of Virginia," which was to have the superior management and direction of and for all matters that should concern the government as well of said several Colonies as of any other place within said precincts of 34° and 45° .

Both Colonies or Companies were created by the same instrument; evidently so that one should have no precedence over the other, especially in the zone between the parallels of 38° and 41° of latitude, in which either Colony might establish its first plantation or settlement, as just stated.

The Second Charter of Virginia is dated May 23, 1609. Settlement had been made at Jamestown under the First Charter under the auspices of the First Colony; but the terms of that Charter not having been adequate to meet existing conditions, the Second Charter was granted. By it Robert Earl of Salisbury and others were incorporated under the name of The Treasurer and Company of Adventurers and Planters of the City of London for the First Colony in Virginia.

By this Charter the territory in that part of America called Virginia lying along the coast distances of two hundred miles to the north and two hundred miles to the south of Point Comfort, and lying from the seacoast aforesaid into the land throughout from sea to sea, was granted to said Treasurer and Company. There was to be a council in England (as in former letters patent) for supervision of the Colony which was to be elected by the Company.

By the Third Charter of Virginia, dated March 12, 1612, the Bermudas were included in the last-named Company's territory. This Charter contained some further provisions in the interest of the Company.

The first assembly in Virginia, also said to be the first representative assembly in America, was convened July 30, 1619, by Governor Yeardley under authority of a commission executed by the Virginia Company.

July 24, 1621, the Treasurer, Council, and Company passed an ordinance for a council of state and general assembly. The council of state was to be chosen by the Treasurer, Council, and Company. The general assembly was to consist of the council of state and two burgesses from every town, hundred, etc., chosen by the people of the Colony.

The general assembly did not become a fixed institution, as the Virginia Charter was annulled under writ of quo warranto in 1624. Thereafter the Colonists could not have demanded government, more or less representative, through their Charter, but with more reason and precedent might ask for such government as being the birth-right of Englishmen. As a matter of royal concession, however, the provincial assembly continued to be regularly called together. Virginia continued a royal province until the War for American Independence.

I will now make reference to the corporation commonly known as the Council for New England.

The patent to the Council for New England granted by James I. under date of November 3, 1620, began by reference to the Virginia Charter of 1606, the First Charter, and the subsequent separation of the First and Second Colonies occasioned by the Second Virginia Charter, that of 1609. The King then proceeds to grant that the territory in breadth from 40° to 48° Northerly latitude and in length from sea to sea shall be the limits of the Second (Virginia) Colony, said territory to be thereafter known by the name of New England in America.¹ The patent made the Council a corporation by the name of The Council established at Plymouth in the County of Devon for the planting, ruling, ordering, and governing of New England in America; and granted to it the territory aforesaid. Said Council was to consist of forty persons.

By instrument of March 19, 1627-8, the Council for New England granted to Sir Henry Rosewell and others the territory afterwards confirmed by royal charter to the Massachusetts Bay Company, and which in a moment I shall describe.

The Council for New England surrendered its patent to the crown in 1635. During its corporate existence it had made grants of territory other than that to Rosewell and others above referred to, among them the grants to Gorges and Mason. The purposes of most of these grants, however, were frustrated, among other causes therefor being the confusing and inconsistent descriptions of the territories granted.

By Charter under date of March 4, 1628-9, King Charles I. confirmed and granted to Sir Henry Rosewell and others the territory which had been granted to them by the Council for New England under instrument of March 19, 1627-8, before mentioned, described in brief as follows:

All that part of New England, in America, lying between the Merrimac and Charles Rivers, also the lands within the space of three English miles on the south part of Charles River or of any and every part thereof, and all lands within three miles to the southward of the southernmost part of Massachusetts Bay; also all lands within three miles to the northward of Merrimac River or to the northward of any and every part thereof, and by the above breadth from the Atlantic on the east to the South Sea (Pacific Ocean) on the west.

The Charter ordains that said Sir Henry Rosewell and others shall be a body corporate and politic by the name of The Governor and Company of the Massachusetts Bay in New England.

The Massachusetts Bay Charter was vacated in 1684 in the reign of Charles II. by judgment of the Court of Chancery upon a writ of scire facias. Thenceforth the Charter was invalid at law, but its mission of stupendous importance had been accomplished. The Court of Chancery at the instigation of the King might make the Charter a legal nullity. But neither Court nor King could annul the results of the work prosecuted under its authority and protection. These are interwoven with the institutions of the land, and with the very structure of the Republic.

You notice from what I have stated that the Council for New England took the place of the Second Virginia Colony,

And that the Council for New England granted to Rosewell and others the territory described and afterwards confirmed to them as the Massachusetts Bay Company by the King;

Therefore, we may say that the Massachusetts Bay Company succeeded to some of the rights and equities of the original Second Virginia Colony, one of the two Colonies named in the First Virginia Charter.

As I have stated, the First Virginia Charter was granted by King James I., in 1606. Let us now recall to mind that the Charter to the Governor and Company of Merchants of London trading into the East Indies, commonly known as the East India Company, was granted by Queen Elizabeth under date of December 31, 1600. Thus these two Charters were granted within a period of six years.

These Charters have severally been amended and changed, or vacated, and other methods of administration and of government have been substituted for them; but they are most important to keep in mind as being the first comprehensive, concrete schemes put in writing and permanent in their consequences for the organized coöperation of Englishmen in carrying out the aspirations of their race for mighty enterprises which, towards the East and towards the West, were to sweep onward over land and sea in successive waves of commercial and political development; and now at the close of three centuries you have seen these influences of common origin, but met from opposite directions in their several courses around the world, coöperating in the Chinese empire for measures in favor of unrestricted commerce and for the amelioration of the condition of the peoples of those distant lands.

Keeping the dates of the East India and Virginia Charters in mind, we are struck by the historical circumstance that Shakespeare began his dramatic and poetical productions about the year 1586, and continued them to a time more or less near his death in 1616. At the period of these Charters, therefore, there was being perpetuated in writing, wisdom the most profound, sentiments the most beautiful and sublime, and fantasies the most spiritual, that any one human mind has ever expressed. Living when he did, that marvellous man and his works have become the common heritage of the descendants of the men of that time, whether those descendants live in the parent land or elsewhere.

Though the political rights of the people of the New England Colonies, other than of those in the Colony of Massachusetts Bay, were not protected by charters in the early years after their settlement, yet largely, perhaps almost entirely, owing to the political distractions in the British Islands, the people of those Colonies had not been interfered with, and practically enjoyed as much autonomy as did the people of the Massachusetts Colony; but there must have been continual uncertainty in their minds as to how long such conditions would continue.

Charters containing liberal provisions were finally obtained by Connecticut (the New Haven and Connecticut Colonies being merged thereby into one Colony) and Rhode Island in the years 1662 and 1663 respectively. These Charters were not vacated by the court, though a process of quo warranto was issued against the Connecticut Charter in 1684, but no judgment was entered thereon. The Charter of Connecticut was in abeyance some two years while the Colony was under the rule of Andros, but government under it was resumed on the deposition of Andros in 1689. The State Constitution of 1776 continued the Charter in force, with a few changes, and it remained the fundamental law of Connecticut until the adoption of a new constitution in 1818. The Charter of Rhode Island, with the exception of the brief period of Andros' administration, 1686 to 1689, continued to be its fundamental law until the adoption of the State Constitution in 1842.

For a good deal of the time previous to the forfeiture of the Massachusetts Charter the affairs of New Hampshire and of the hither portion of Maine had been supervised by the Massachusetts Colony. The Plymouth Colony never obtained a royal charter as a separate colony. It was united with the Massachusetts Bay Colony in the Province Charter of 1691.

The Massachusetts Colony from her greater population, wealth, and material resources, and occupying a more secure position from the possession of her Charter, naturally held the leading position among the New England Colonies in the early period; and her authority and influence was undoubtedly largely instrumental in establishing what we understand as New England institutions in those other Colonies as well as within her own limits. Moreover, many persons had gone into the other New England Colonies after having lived awhile in the Massachusetts Colony, where they must have become familiar with her colonial and town administration.

A moment's reflection will show us that the people of the Massachusetts Bay Colony during the space of two generations, roughly speaking, following the settlement, exercised a greater degree of freedom in the administration of government than the people of Massachusetts have ever since exercised. For even since being independent of Great Britain, Massachusetts as well as the other States, on the acceptance of the Constitution, surrendered certain prerogatives of government, and rightly so, to the National Union. This surrender was voluntary to be sure, but a full appreciation of its character and extent and of the fact that the general government now exercises within Massachusetts the several powers granted it, makes us realize by comparison how extensive must have been the autonomy of the Colony during the existence of its Charter.

The memory of the successful experiment of the Colony in the management of its affairs through the greater part of the seventeenth century undoubtedly exercised a considerable influence in making her people intolerant of interference, and in keeping them in a constant state of restlessness until the outcome of the War for Independence.

Outside New England and Virginia, most of the English Colonies on the American continent were, in their early history, administered under the so-called proprietary charters. In most of those charters there was the provision that laws might be passed by the proprietaries with the consent of the general assemblies, or vice versa, the consent of the king being required in some charters.

The case of Pennsylvania may be referred to as an instance of a proprietary charter.

William Penn had petitioned for the charter or patent to satisfy a claim of some 16,000 pounds he had inherited from his father, Admiral Penn, against the King. The Charter, dated March 4, 1681, made the grant of the territory to Penn, his heirs and assigns. Among the considerations for the grant as recited in the Charter was the conduct and courage of Admiral Penn in the battle and victory against the Dutch Fleet in 1665. Thus this great concession was made to this man of peace largely because of the death and destruction dealt out by his father in the operations of war. We can imagine the witty Charles giving utterance to some pleasantry on the acceptance by the bustling Quaker of a patent containing a sentiment so inconsistent with his principles.

In the Proprietary Colonies it is evident that the body of citizens or freemen had not the same influence in the government that they had in the New England Colonies. On account of his or their original ownership of all the land and for other reasons the influence and authority of the proprietary, whether an individual or a group of men, naturally overshadowed that of any of the freemen. There was, however, probably some improvement in the position of the freemen when the charters were surrendered to or purchased by the Crown, as was done in the case of some of them, after which the colonies were administered as royal provinces.

I now invite you to consider the peculiar feature of the Massachusetts Charter to which I have referred, to the action of the members of the company because of this feature of their Charter, and to some of the important historical consequences that have followed such action.

The great companies chartered by the sovereigns of England, of which the Virginia Council or Company may be considered an instance, possessed functions both commercial and colonial. Generally speaking, territories were either granted them by the king, or they were empowered to acquire lands from other sources. The freemen, or members of the companies, were citizens of the British Isles; as I have before stated, meetings or courts of the companies were held in England, and their boards of chief officers held their meetings and had their offices in England, for the most part in the City of London. From thence these boards of officers sent out governors and other officials and agents to the territories owned by the company, or to the places where their commercial ventures were being prosecuted. These officials and agents were to preserve law and order in the territories and about the property of the company, and to attend to its matters of trade and business. They necessarily must have had considerable discretionary powers, but they were always subject to the governing board in England. The corporation thus being resident in England and its highest officers acting there in their official capacity, any proceedings on its or their part unsatisfactory to the king would soon be made known to him; and the company would be liable to interference from the royal government, through process from the courts or otherwise, in cases where the proceedings of the company were not in accordance with the king's wishes.

As instances of such companies which had their chief governing board in England, I would mention the East India Company, the Virginia Company, the Council for New England, and, at a later date, the Hudson's Bay Company. I would also say in this connection that in the document written by Governor Winthrop hereinafter quoted from, it is stated that those who procured patents for the Bermudas and the West Indies kept the headquarters of those companies in England.

Such being the practice at the period when the Massachusetts Charter was granted, some far-sighted men perceived that, if the provisions of the contemplated charter or patent should not in terms prohibit the company from having its general courts and the meetings of its chief governing officers held in its territory in America, but should leave it permissible for them to do so, — that is, leave it permissible for the company to become resident in Massachusetts and to take its charter thither, — and if such transfer to America should be effected, not only would the enterprise be more likely to be successful commercially, but practically all the other functions of the government of the territory would be merged in those of the government under the charter so located in Massachusetts; and that the government of that territory would in effect be a Commonwealth, subject in a general way to the king, but removed from the influence of the royal court, and comparatively free from its tyrannical exactions. Undoubtedly the knowledge of the success of the Plymouth Colony in establishing and maintaining a form of government and of religious organization most satisfactory to its people without interference from the home government was suggestive of the idea. But the object now sought was to have the institutions which the leading men of the enterprise had in mind to establish protected by royal charter. They were successful in obtaining such a charter in this respect as they desired. For if you will examine the Massachusetts Charter, you will find no provisions requiring the Company or its board of government to be resident in England. The Charter being free of any such restriction, it followed as a matter of law that the Company's entire machinery of government might be located within its own landed possessions and where practically all of the operations of the Corporation had best be exercised. And that the omission in the Charter of provisions requiring the Company to keep its headquarters in England was intentional, and that such omission was at the instance of the leaders in the enterprise, I will now cite evidence to show.

In connection with the granting of the Massachusetts Bay Charter, and in accordance, as I understand it, with the practice in such cases, there was issued from the Privy Seal office, dated February, 1628-9, the so-called Docquet of Grant to Sir Henry Rosewell and others authorizing the draft of the charter. This appears to have been a brief memorandum of more or less of the provisions intended to be incorporated in the charter.

The following is a copy of the Docquet :

"A grant and confirmation unto Sir Henry Rosewell, his partners, and their associates, to their heirs and assigns for ever, of a part of America, called New-England, granted unto him by a charter from divers noblemen and others, to whom the same was granted by the late King James, with a tenure in socage, and reservation of one-third part of the gold and silver ore : Incorporating them by the name of the governor and company of the Massachusetts-Bay, in New England, in America, with such other privileges, for electing governors and officers here in England for the said company; with such other privileges and immunities as were originally granted to the said noblemen and others, and are usually allowed to corporations here in England. His Majesty's pleasure, signified by Sir Ralph Freeman, upon direction of the lord-keeper of the great seal; subscribed by Mr. Attorney general; procured by the lord viscount Dorchester; February, 1628. Memorandum. Their charter passed 4th March following."¹

It thus appears that on some date in February, 1628-9, it was distinctly stated in an official document that the governors and officers for the Company were to be elected "here in England."

If such had been the intention of the royal government on the fourth of March following (the date of the Massachusetts Charter), a provision to that effect at greater length and in more detail would have been inserted in the Charter, for the Docquet bore no comparison with the Charter either in legal importance or in length or elaboration of language. If there were nothing further known on the matter these extracts from the records would show that the intention of the royal government requiring the residence of the corporation to be in England had changed between some day in February and the fourth day of March, 1628-9, and that it had yielded that requirement on or before the latter date. But we have something outside the record which effect-ally corroborates this conclusion; something not less than the statement of Governor Winthrop himself.

¹The language of the Docquet, as quoted, is taken from the copy of same in the lecture delivered by Joel Parker, LL.D., before the Lowell Institute, entitled, "The First Charter and the Early Religious Legislation of Massachusetts." That and other lectures were published in one volume by the Massachusetts Historical Society in 1869, and the copy of the Docquet is on page 381 of that volume. See also with reference to Docquet annexed to Bill providing for the Charter Memorial History of Boston, Volume 1, pp. 331, 332.

In the old Winthrop family residence at New London was found some forty years since the original draft in Governor Winthrop's handwriting of a document entitled "Arbitrary Government described; and the Government of the Massachusetts vindicated from that aspersion." This paper was written in 1644. The occasion for it was because of the contention by the Deputies that the Magistrates were exercising arbitrary government in opposing the Deputies' claim of judicial authority, and perhaps for other reasons. The document is in the nature of a treatise or argument to show that the course pursued by the Magistrates under the Charter was not open to the charge of arbitrary government. There was also found in the same file with the treatise, the report of a committee of the Deputies upon it and Winthrop's commentaries on that report. This brief statement of the purpose of Winthrop's treatise is made so you may see in what connection was written the following paragraph referring to the Massachusetts Charter, taken from the document:

"The last clause is for the Governing of the Inhabitants within the Plantation. For it being the manner for such as procured Patents for Virginia, Bermudas and the West Indies, to keep the chief Government in the hands of the Company residing in England (& so this was intended & with much difficulty we got it absconded) this clause is inserted in this and all other Patents whereby the Company in England might establish a Government & Officers here in any form used in England as Governor and Counsel, Justices of Peace, Mayor, Bailiffs &c., & accordingly Mr. Endicott and others with him, were established a Governor and Council here, before the Government was transferred hither: and that clause is expressed in these words: —"

He then quotes the paragraph in the Charter giving authority to the Governor and Company in general court assembled to make, etc., orders, laws, etc., for the government of the Plantation and Inhabitants and the appointment of officers.¹

So we have Governor Winthrop's statement that it was originally intended that the chief government of the Colony should be kept in England, but that those moving for the Charter got such provisions absconded in the course of its preparation.

This statement completely explains why the provisions of the Docquet requiring the officers of the Company to be elected in England were not incorporated in the Charter, and shows that such omission was intentional.

Historians and others have marvelled that the King granted a Charter which did not contain terms requiring the government of the Colony to remain in England. For instance, Chalmers, referring to the Massachusetts Charter, says,² "A Charter which the enthusiasm of those days considered as sacred, because supposed to be derived from the Providence of Heaven."

It would be a most interesting inquiry to endeavor to ascertain how the King and his advisers came to acquiesce in the omission of the provisions requiring the company with its chief government to be resident in England, but the investigation of that subject is beyond the scope of this paper. In aid of reaching a conclusion, however, it may be assumed, I think, that the far reaching consequences of the transfer of the government of the Colony to America had not been seen by the King and his advisers, but had been reasoned out by a few of those interested in procuring the Charter. And this proceeding is one of the many instances of the profound sagacity and great ability shown by the men who founded the Commonwealth.

The expediency of having nothing in the Charter to prevent its removal to New England became evident when at the General Court of the Company held Aug. 29, 1629, it was determined that the Government and Patent should be settled in New England. Months of preparation followed; then the nine weeks' voyage and, on June 12, 1630, the arrival at Salem of Governor Winthrop and several of his associates with the Charter in their possession.

The Commonwealth may be said to have come into existence on that date.

There was now no longer need of the local government of which Endicott had been at the head, and the same appears to have lapsed out of existence by tacit acquiescence. The King had no officer within the limits of the Company's Patent, nor had the royal government any bureau or department in England, whereby such of its powers as remained over the territory after the granting of the Charter could be exercised. The home government did indeed within a few years after the transfer hither of the Company's chief government make certain desultory efforts to exercise control over the Colonists; they even instituted process in court by way of quo warranto to have the Charter annulled. . But all these proceedings were confined to England and no effects whatever resulted from them on this side of the water. And some thirty-four years were to elapse before a vessel of the royal navy was to enter Boston Harbor. There was no precedent to apply to conditions existing in this wilderness. Under such circumstances it became the duty as well as the privilege of the Company and its officers to perform all the necessary and proper functions of government and administration which the royal authority might have exercised, but which it neglected so to do. Therefore, whether under the Charter or otherwise, the whole government and administration of the territory fell upon the freemen and officers of the Company, and they assumed the same without any show of false modesty.

The Colonists were now upon their own landed possessions. They must have been largely strangers to each other; yet they worked together in a remarkable way for the common purpose. For years they had chafed under religious and commercial restrictions. They were now to have a free hand. At the same time they realized and accepted the great responsibilities they assumed. Thenceforth they and their immediate descendants prosecuted their work with such a high degree of mental and physical vigor and energy, and so well directed, that the result was a social, industrial, and political development the equal of which up to that time has never been recorded in history.

Let me briefly recall some of the measures they effected.

Though they could have relied entirely upon their title to the land obtained under the Patent, they purchased of the Indians their rights in the same.

They protected the Indians from injustice and imposition.

The establishment of town governments, and as incident thereto, the town meeting; the admiration of many statesmen and philosophers abroad as well as in other parts of this Nation.

Two legislative chambers with the power of the negative one upon the other.

The public school system; among other purposes therefor being to prepare coming generations for citizenship, for which qualifications should be required in every genuine republic.

Within seven years of the transfer of the Charter hither they founded Harvard College, now become the great University.

Massachusetts joined with the Plymouth, Connecticut, and New Haven Colonies (1643) in the confederation known as the United Colonies of New England. That confederation preceded by over a century the national union of the States.

Public registration of conveyances of land and of wills whereby titles to real estate were made more secure, and their investigation was facilitated.

Placing supervision of the administration of the estates of deceased persons in public officers, instead of having the same under ecclesiastical control as was the case in England.

Establishing public records of births, marriages, and deaths.

The division and disposition of the Colony's territory in such a manner that individuals obtained no such monopolies of land as prevented industrial development.

You recognize these different measures as I mention them. My excuse for enumerating them is that I have put them in close succession so as to enable us to appreciate their vast importance in the aggregate.

The circumstances attending the removal of the chief government hither and the consequences resulting therefrom ought to be made known to all those who should be instructed in the history of New England. In this connection I may state here that in all the history of British colonization there is no other instance of a charter government similar to that of Massachusetts being removed out of England. It was a distinguishing characteristic of the Massachusetts Colonists to proceed on original lines of thought and action.

Let us remember the able and honest administration of the affairs of the Colony, the high degree of law and order which was maintained, the equality of all men before the law, and, whenever there was occasion, the rapid preparations for hostilities and the vigor with which the same were prosecuted to successful conclusions.

New England has never been considered as having a great wealth of natural resources, but such resources as there were were made the most of. Of the timber which the forests furnished ships were built; they were sent along the coast and across the ocean and a considerable commerce was developed with the West Indies.¹ Vessels were also used in the fisheries, which became a large and profitable industry. Roads were laid out, bridges built, and water powers developed. Areas of forest and waste became fields and orchards; in fact, every trade and business was being encouraged and prosecuted which a people of intense industry could make yield reasonable returns. How great were these business and commercial developments is shown when in 1652 the Colony took the bold step of establishing a mint for the coinage of money. It was a proceeding involving great responsibilities in the relations of the Colony with England, but the men in authority considered that it was called for by the conditions then existing.

As I have before stated, the Massachusetts Bay Charter was vacated by the English Court of Chancery in 1684, but New England institutions had come to stay. The would-be tyrant, James II., through his creature, Sir Edmund Andros, undertook to stamp them out at the same time that he was trying to destroy the constitutional rights of Englishmen everywhere; but some significant incidents in England convinced him of the expediency of leaving Great Britain; and the case of Sir Edmund Andros was attended to here in Boston; and a long-suffering people both in the British Islands and America rid themselves of future afflictions from the arbitrary rule of the House of Stuart.¹

In February, 1689, William and Mary were declared King and Queen. Through the exertions of Increase Mather and others the Province Charter was granted under date of Oct. 7, 1691. This Charter provided that in all acts of government to be done by the General Court or in Council the governor (who was to be appointed by the king) should have the negative voice, and that no laws or statutes should be of any validity without the governor's consent in writing; and in addition, that all ¹The proceeding against the Massachusetts Charter was but one in an organized attack upon the charter rights of those who were not in favor with royalty. Under process of quo warranto, sentence vacating the charter of the City of London was passed June 12, 1683. The following extract from Hume's "History of England" shows some of the consequences of the forfeiture of that charter: "All the corporations in England, having the example of London before their eyes, saw how vain it would prove to contend with the Court, and were, most of them, successively induced to surrender their charters into the King's hands. Considerable sums were exacted for restoring the charters, and all offices of power and profit were left at the disposal of the Crown." Vol. 6, p. 215.

In connection with the forfeiture of the Massachusetts Charter, it may be interesting to recall the occasion when the Marquis of Halifax, then Lord Privy Seal, advocated measures to secure the rights and liberties of the people of Massachusetts. I quote from Macaulay's "History of England." (Vol. 1, page 254):

"At one of the last councils which Charles held, a remarkable scene took place. The charter of Massachusetts had been forfeited. A question arose, how for the future the colony should be governed. The general opinion of the Board was that the whole power, legislative as well as executive, should abide in the Crown. Halifax took the opposite side, and argued with great energy against absolute monarchy, and in favor of representative government. It was vain, he said, to think that a population, sprung from the English stock, and animated by English feelings, would long bear to be deprived of English institutions. Life he exclaimed, would not be worth having in a country where liberty and property were at the mercy of one despotic master. The Duke of York was greatly incensed by this language, and represented to his brother the danger of retaining in office a man who appeared to be infected with all the worst notions of Marvell and Sidney."

For this fearless language we should ever hold Lord Halifax in grateful recollection.

laws as soon as passed or enacted should forthwith be sent to England for the king's approbation or disallowance; those disallowed by the king within three years after so having been presented to him were to become void and of no effect; and laws not so disallowed were to remain in force until repealed by the General Court.

It was an experience different from that under the Colony Charter for the people thus to have to submit the laws which they wanted to the approval of persons not belonging to the Colony. But the town government, the town meeting, the system of public education, and many other features of the administration of public affairs were not affected, and the relations with the British Government continued to be as satisfactory as, under all the circumstances, could be expected for some three-quarters of a century. And then ridding himself of the counsels of men whose wisdom, energy, and patriotism had contributed so much to the true greatness of Great Britain, and surrounding himself with men as nominal advisers who would simply do his bidding, George III., supported by parliamentary majorities of men incapable of foresight into the future, prosecuted that wrong-headed policy which cost himself untold damage to his kingly prestige, and his country the loss of her most valuable colonies.

And in organizing for the struggle and in contending in behalf of the great cause, you see the powerful effects of the town meeting and the system of public education; and you also see the general plan of the United Colonies of New England reappear in the Continental Congress.

The independence of the Colonies was acknowledged. The expansive human forces were now absolutely free of restraint from beyond the Atlantic. Massachusetts ships were soon upon every sea. The men of New England spread westward over the Continent developing the resources of the land, and constructing constitutions for great Commonwealths. The fertile areas of the West were made to yield to their utmost. Metals and minerals were excavated in ever increasing quantities. At first these results were accomplished by physical exertion, crude, but characteristic of the people in its persistency and power; then came the labor-saving and scientific means and methods, in the development of which no other people have shown more signal success. As steam came into general use manufactures multiplied. Railroads were built and developed into systems the greatest in the world. In due time the intangible, subtle influence, whose attributes and nature were made better understood by the Boston-born Franklin, was prescribed to serve humanity in the shapes of the telegraph and telephone, and, latterly, as transmitted power. The economic conditions in the Southern States and such authority of Spain as remained in this hemisphere were not in harmony with this expansive and all-pervading industrial activity, and went down before it. Measures have been devised for preventing diseases; and means have been discovered for temporary oblivion to pain, whereby surgery has been permitted to conduct its operations to such marvellous results.

Am I wrong in saying that New England institutions have exercised a telling influence in developing these and very many other industrial enterprises, discoveries, and important results? One consequence of the education and discipline identified with those institutions is that great numbers of men become qualified to serve their fellow-men as administrators, whether in public affairs or in great corporate interests and enterprises. Notice as instances of such public service that Leonard Wood, William H. Taft, Sanford B. Dole, and Charles H. Allen are, or have been, the first civil, or quasi-civil, executives of Cuba, the Philippines, Hawaii, and Porto Rico respectively, —the conditions in each of these instances far varying from those in the others.

If this great educational and industrial development is of benefit to mankind the question of its causes becomes of practical, as well as of historical, importance. The intense mental and physical activity as exhibited in the directions, some of which I have referred to, is not the mere striving after wealth or fame; it is indicative of administrative, constructive, and creative capacity and power, than which there are no higher qualities of the human intellect and character. The Massachusetts Colonists possessed this administrative and constructive capacity and power in an eminent degree, and the same has come by inheritance down through the generations. The Fathers looked far into the future when they saw the easy transition from the great land and commercial corporation into the Commonwealth; and also saw that it was essential to every true Commonwealth that the great body of those who participated in its affairs should be men of morality, of intelligence, and of industrial enterprise.

I have endeavored to state some of the consequences of transferring to these shores the charter government of the Massachusetts Bay Company.

It will now not be unprofitable for us to contemplate for a brief space what the resulting conditions of that Colony would probably have been if the charter government had not been so transferred.

First we may safely say that so many people would not have come over to the Company's territory. The fact that the Patent and the Company's government were to be located in New England was the means of inducing several persons of substance to come themselves and to transport their families and property hither. Then those who did come over would not have been the same type of men. They would not have had the same objects in view. Those who had emigration under contemplation undoubtedly were informed as to the unsatisfactory conditions in the Virginia Colony. The Virginia Company's Charter had been vacated by the Court in 1624, as I have stated. The affairs of the Company under its board of management or council sitting in London had gone on from bad to worse, until it was with some show of reason that James I. caused the proceedings to be brought on which its Charter was declared forfeited. Such an example would operate to deter a great many from emigrating to a colony liable to a like experience. Furthermore, on general principles a man of discretion would hesitate to go to a distant land and to commit more or less of his and his family's future prospects to the disposition of a board of officers sitting somewhere in England, 3,000 miles away, whose members were not from personal experience familiar with the conditions and wants of the settlers. A board of officers of a corporation of the type of those organized to dispose of land and for trade and profit was ill suited to administer and regulate the affairs political and municipal of a large community of their own countrymen so far away.

What between lack of proper administration and the diverse interests of the members of the Company in England and of the Colonists, the Massachusetts Company, if its government had remained in England, would undoubtedly have met the same fate as the Virginia Company; its Charter would have been annulled, and a governor of the Colony would have been appointed by the king. If the latter had allowed a representative assembly, its acts would have been subject to the absolute negative of the governor, of the king, or of both. Under such circumstances it is doubtful to what extent, if at all, any of the public measures of the Colony which I have mentioned would have been enacted or adopted; and New England institutions, as we understand them, could not have reached the high degree of vigor and effectiveness they actually attained. Thus we see how the development of New England, yes, even the history of the United States, might have been modified and changed if the charter government had not been brought hither.

William Stoughton in the election sermon which he delivered in 1668 gave utterance to these forceful words :

“ God sifted a whole nation that he might send choice grain over into this wilderness.”

One at all familiar with the subject cannot fail to be of opinion that for the most part only men possessed of certain sterling qualities came over to Massachusetts in the early period. We cannot imagine those colonists to have been gathered at random. The men prominent in the movement were, or soon became, freemen of the Corporation. Unlike Englishmen who invested in other foreign trading companies and who retained the profits and returns in the mother-country, the member of the Massachusetts Company, with certain exceptions not affecting the result, brought his property hither with him, and here it ever after remained. That Company had an extensive territory in which large numbers of those who early came here were, or expected to be, and soon became, interested. They came, among other purposes, to develop the resources of that territory and to build up manufactures and commerce; and while they may have expected to better their condition in the new world, the evidence goes to show that they did not come forth in order to escape a condition of poverty at home. From all these circumstances it is clear that they must have been men of substance, and men of adventurous and enterprising spirit as well.

Most of those interested in the Colony movement held certain religious beliefs in common. They wanted to congregate upon their own territory and organize religious worship and a system of churches based upon their common faith. Persons of integrity who were found to participate in that faith and became members had an equal voice in church organization and procedure. They had no superior vested with dictatorial authority; they wanted neither the intervention nor intercession of prince or prelate, and they wanted no unwelcome intruders upon a territory which was theirs and which, under conditions then existing, they had the right to administer. It was their earnest wish to convert the heathen; and if they failed to bring the North American Indian to adopt the principles and practices of Christianity to any great extent, we must in justice have it in mind that such efforts since that time have not met with conspicuous success. The settlers were, therefore, men of religious convictions, and men who realized and accepted the moral responsibility which their proceedings involved.

Those joining in the emigration to Massachusetts must for the most part have been of robust health. In view of the prospective hardships and exposure, it is not probable that many persons ill conditioned as to health and strength would have joined in the emigration.

The Colonists must have been people of physical courage. This remark applies to women as well as men, for entire families participated in this emigration. They came from comfortable homes to stay here for the rest of their lives. They were to settle on the border of the unexplored, continental wilderness, exposed to attacks from out the same by savages, and perhaps by hostile Frenchmen; and exposed by sea to such enemies as they or Great Britain might have in the future; yes, perhaps even to hostile proceedings by the royal government in certain contingencies. But these and other dangers wrought no discouragement to the adventurers.

The members of the Massachusetts Company wanted the government upon the large territory which they possessed to be administered for the maintenance of law and order, and for the protection of individual rights; and in such manner as to enable every citizen to enjoy the fruits of his enterprise and ability. While the Company was invested with some political functions by its Charter, and other political powers were assumed after the transfer of the Charter hither, the Company, by that Charter, was, for the most part, framed upon the structural lines of one of the great English commercial and trading companies. The affairs of such corporations were administered by officers chosen by the members for limited terms. Public sentiment and a corporate force of habit, if I may so term it, urged those officers to direct their best efforts for the benefit of the corporation, which meant for the benefit of its members. When the terms of those officers expired they remained simple members without other prerogatives or authority. These features of corporate proceedings and management corresponded in a striking degree with the form of republican government to which the Colonists aspired. In practice the members of the Company after coming here themselves assumed and invested their officers with additional political powers and functions; and in a remarkably short period there was established and in operation that Commonwealth the desire for which was so deep in their hearts.

Now it is impossible to conceive of a community accomplishing such high ideals in religion and church organization and in civil government without being possessed of strong self-reliance, of high intelligence, and of a considerable measure of education.

We conclude, then, that the rugged conditions here in Massachusetts and the nature of the undertaking required that those who participated therein in good faith and were in sympathy with its objects as laid down by its projectors must, for the most part, have been possessed of more than the average measure of physical health and vigor, of self-reliance, of religious convictions, of personal integrity, of physical courage, of intelligence and education, and of commercial enterprise, and, as a matter of fact, the history of the Massachusetts Colony sustains us in that conclusion.

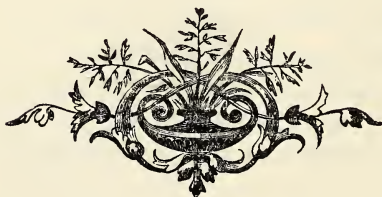

And now as to the nation from which the Colonists came.

It was the nation just entering upon the definitive struggle for constitutional government, and which within the century was to bring the great question to a successful solution. It was the people just beginning to send forth its representatives into the world's uttermost parts, setting vast territories in order for the exercise of constitutional principles, making the earth yield of her abundance, and establishing conditions most favorable to the beneficial use by all conditions of men of the results of their skill and industry. It was the nation of Bacon and of Hampden, of Drake and of Hawkins, of Captain John Smith and of Walter Raleigh. It was the nation of Shakespeare :

“ This earth of majesty, this seat of Mars,
This other Eden, demi paradise ;
This fortress, built by Nature for herself,
Against infection and the hand of war ;
This happy breed of men, this little world ;
This precious stone set in the silver sea.”

It was from such a nation that those men were sifted out. And, qualified for the great enterprise, they came over into this wilderness, and established the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

THE AMERICAN TOWN IN THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

ADDRESS BY C. W. ERNST, A.M.

FEEL a little reluctance in coming here. While I have a salary from the City of Boston, I do not quite like to travel outside of my immediate duties.

It is not easy to say things that are very pleasing, or new, or important ; but you have made my task easy by letting me talk to you, and with you, on THE AMERICAN TOWN IN THE AMERICAN REVOLUTION.

I have an impression that historians have rather overlooked that subject. To be sure, I have not read all historians, and, perhaps, cannot ; there are so many of them. And I never knew that it was worth while to read second-hand information when you can get first-hand evidence. But if the historians have left any impression upon public opinion, is it not something like this, that people view the Revolution as a conflict between the American people and the Crown of England, between the United States and Great Britain ?

But when Boston was evacuated, there was no United States. We all remember Lexington and Concord and Bunker Hill. When those great events took place, there was no United States. Is it not true that the United States was rather the result of the Revolution than its cause or its occasion ? The Revolution, at least in its origin, cannot have been a conflict between Great Britain and the United States.

We count it a peculiar glory that the first and greatest of all events in the Revolution, the evacuation of Boston, took place before the United States existed, and contributed very largely to the establishment of the United States.

Nor was it a conflict, so far as we can see, between the Kingdom of Great Britain and any of the American States. A conflict between the Crown of England and the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, or the Province of Massachusetts, was impossible. The charter of Massachusetts was given by the Crown. The Crown was free to change it, to replace it by another, to cancel it altogether. There was no opportunity for a conflict between the Province and the Crown.

The Crown sent its own Governor here. To be sure, we had the General Court, which represented the people of Massachusetts; but every Act of the General Court was subject to revision by the Crown Governor, and, after the Governor was through with these Acts of the General Court, they were all packed up and sent to England, to be revised by the Crown, meaning the Privy Council.

And I wonder greatly that the Privy Council, which was supposed to comprise at least a few bright men, not many, should have let so many Massachusetts Acts slip through.

Now, if the conflict was not, in its origin, between the Crown of England and the United States, nor between the Crown and the individual States, what was it? By elimination, I think, we shall arrive at the conclusion that it began as a conflict between a great Empire and a little Town in North America called Boston.

That statement sounds strange. And yet it is not without some foundation. At least, in those days the world took that view. The outside world, the continent of Europe, foreign nations, saw nothing but on the one side a New World Empire called Great Britain, and the other a little Town in North America called Boston. And the world was duly astonished.

When the people of France invented a new game of cards, about 1776, they called it "Boston."

You all know the story of Captain Gray, the first white man to take a ship into the Columbia River. Those poor natives asked him: "Who are you? Are you Spanish?" "No." "Are you an Englishman?" "No." "Where do you come from?"

"I come from Boston." "Oh, Boston is a good Town. We know all about Boston. You are welcome." And from that event it is called the Columbia River today, and Americans are still known in Alaska as Boston men.

I merely wanted to give you an intimation of the view that mankind took of the origin of the American Revolution in 1775.

And it seems to me that the function of the Town in the Revolution is in some need of reconsideration, for many reasons. We all know the latest American history, written by a distinguished fellow-citizen of ours, in which we read once more that up to the Revolution all America was loyal to the Crown, loyal to England. I think they teach something like that in the schools, that, prior to the Revolution, all Americans were loyal British subjects.

Now, was that true of Boston? Was Boston loyal or attached or true to the Crown prior to the Revolution? Was Boston loyal to the Crown at the treaty of Paris in 1763, and at the time of the Stamp Act? Every school-boy, to use Macaulay's exaggeration, knows better.

Or go back a little. We have all heard of Pepperell taking Louisburg, in 1745. And why did he take it? He took it for exactly the same reason that Mr. Whitney has now taken it. It was wanted for the coal that is there. That is the true reason why Pepperell went to Louisburg and took it.

And then the English Crown concluded the peace of Aix-la-Chapelle, in 1748, and restored Louisburg and the coal fields to the French. Do you think that Boston felt grateful then, or loyal?

I might say something about the treaty of Utrecht, or about the Postal Act of 1710. In the days of the war over the Spanish succession, they carried through Parliament an Act which arranged the postal service in America and our postal rates. That was the first interference on the part of Parliament with the domestic concerns of this continent. And Massachusetts never recognised it. It was never proclaimed in Massachusetts. It was always repudiated; and, at the first opportunity they had, they established what they called the Constitutional Post, as against the King's Post. For Massachusetts was always constitutional ; Massachusetts was always orderly ; Massachusetts always honored the law.

They tell you that we had smugglers. It is not true.

Massachusetts in the days of Queen Anne, as always, rejected Parliamentary interference with the domestic concerns of this Continent.

Or, go back still further, to 1691, when the Charter was given us by William and Mary. Do you think Massachusetts felt grateful for that Charter? How could its inhabitants feel grateful? They had no part in it.

King William sent over a Collector of Customs, by the name of Brenton. He was a Newport man. The name is commemorated in Brenton's Reef, which you know. Do you think Massachusetts felt grateful to him? Is it likely that Boston felt grateful to Andros, or for the quashing of the first Charter, or for the Restoration, in 1660, when the Stuarts returned to the throne?

Do you think Boston was loyal in 1630? Do you think Winthrop and his men came here to establish loyalty to England? Why, in the name of Heaven, did they leave England? Immigrants are sometimes suspected. You don't know, perhaps, why men leave one country and adopt another. Mr. Winthrop and the glorious fifteen hundred that came with him left England for good and sufficient reasons: To get rid of the Crown, to get rid of the Bishops, to get rid of Parliament, and to carve out their own fortunes. That is enough reason for any one.

They were all Church of England men. The first thing they did when they came to Boston was to turn their backs upon the whole outfit, and to start an independent establishment of their own, which we know by the name of Congregationalism. Now, don't imagine that men change their church for light reasons. They don't.

And at the first opportunity they changed the whole Constitution of Massachusetts. They came here a trading company. As soon as they knew the settlement might possibly live, they started an independent Government, which they called the Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

They abolished the oath of allegiance to the King, and required the oath of allegiance to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts. They threw aside the very essence of the Charter of 1629, and started a Government of their own.

And, to make sure of everything, they built a fort, still commemorated in our "Fort Hill." That fort was not put up against Frenchmen, nor against Indians, nor against Spaniards, but against King Charles and the Government of England.

Historians of Massachusetts have not told us this interesting transition from a mere trading company, — comparable at best to something like the East India Company, — to the Commonwealth of Massachusetts, which is a symbol of honor among all nations and at all times.

It is a small matter, but it is worth telling, that, when Cromwell started the Commonwealth of England, he copied even the name from Massachusetts. It is always well to copy Massachusetts. Massachusetts has no apologies to offer.

When our first Charter was quashed in the times of James the Second, and a new departure had to be made, King William did the best he could. He gave up all that he thought he could give up, and he left to us all that he thought he could possibly leave to us. But he did appoint a Collector of Customs. And if you wish to get the quintessence of Boston history, study your custom house under the Crown.

The King appointed a Collector of Customs, to look after the Acts of Trade. It was a very delicate position to occupy.

Massachusetts established a protective tariff for revenue. And throughout the Province age you will find that there was a two-headed customs establishment, the one representing the Crown, of which you have read exaggerated reports, and the other conducted by the Province of Massachusetts, of which you have heard very little. But it is sometimes the men of whom you hear the least that do the most work, and I suppose we are all old enough to have some distrust of those names that are so loudly heralded abroad.

However that may be, the King's Collector was apparently called "Collector" because he collected nothing, and the Puritans did the business. The naval officer was always appointed by Massachusetts, and the entries and clearances always ran, not in the name of the King, but in the name of Massachusetts ; and that settles the business. What collection there was of import duties was always paid to the Collector of Massachusetts and not to the Collector of the Crown. Brenton, whose name I have mentioned, I suppose never lived in Boston. He was a discreet man.

His successors are mentioned by those interesting people who write fiction. Sir Henry Frankland, you have heard of. He was married by a pretty girl from Marblehead, Agnes Surriage. I think Frankland got the better of that business, because Agnes Surriage gave him something,— New England birth and New England character,— and he gave her very little to be proud of.

I doubt if Frankland ever collected enough money to pay office rent. I doubt whether he ever collected enough money as Collector of Customs in Boston to pay a clerk. If he spent money, he did not get it from his office of Customs in Boston. He must have got it elsewhere. We know he didn't earn it.

In fact, the Crown never had a Boston custom house of its own until immediately before the Revolution. And that is rather interesting. Massachusetts always had a custom house, where people entered and cleared their vessels, and paid import duties. The Crown had no custom house until about 1767 or 1768, in State Street, the place which you all know. Up to that time, the custom house of the Crown was in the parlor or reception room of the gentleman who happened to hold the commission from the King as Collector of Customs in Boston.

Now, what does all this mean? In the first place, that, in custom-house matters and in regard to the Acts of Trade, people in Boston somehow always outwitted the Crown from the start. The people of Boston were too bright to resist the Acts of Trade openly ; but they never had any idea of complying with them ; and they didn't. The Crown was bright enough not to try to enforce the Acts of Trade until after the fall of Quebec and Canada, when the Crown felt that it was comparatively secure, and might not any longer require the coöperation of Massachusetts and its people in subduing the French. Up to the days of the treaty of Paris, in 1763, the Crown, as we know, suffered them to do almost anything.

Our people — and this is important — never recognised the Acts of Trade as binding. Our people never recognised the right of Parliament to legislate for Massachusetts. Our people never acknowledged, either directly or indirectly, that the Parliament in London could overrule that Parliament at home, which we call the General Court.

I am amazed to think that any American historians have thrown out the idea that the Hancocks and others were smugglers, because they did not comply with the British Acts of Parliament. It is a libel. They did not smuggle. They were consistent. Massachusetts never recognised any Act of Parliament as binding, and the merchants were bound to disobey every Act of Parliament, because it was an unconstitutional interference, as they thought, with the rights of the people here in Boston and in Massachusetts. It is a misnomer to call it smuggling. They stood up for good and ancient American rights.

After the fall of Canada, when the Crown and its Ministers felt comparatively secure, they thought they might enforce the Acts of Trade. It was then that Boston said: "You shall not." It was then that the people of Boston declared: "We will not comply with the Acts of Trade or any other Act passed by Parliament." And that is all there is to it.

They put it into the most diplomatic form imaginable. But they stood to their text. They knew their minds, and they were willing to carry things to the bitter end.

The relations between the Crown and Boston were not a conflict between the customs authorities in London and the merchants of Boston. It was a straight conflict between the Crown establishment and Parliament on the one hand, and the Town of Boston on the other. For the people in Boston were united and practically unanimous. They knew their minds, and they were ready to take the results.

It is not usual, as you know, for public opinion to side with merchants. It is the fashion, even today, to denounce all sorts of trusts and to cast suspicion upon harmless millionaires. If a merchant has trouble at the custom house today, do you think that the newspapers would tear themselves to pieces in vindicating the rights and convenience of the merchant?

But prior to the Revolution, say, from 1761, the days of the Writs of Assistance and James Otis, to 1776, you will find that the Town was unanimous, in its collective capacity as a municipal corporation, in standing up for the merchants' rights; because the plain people, who always have an inkling of how things are going, felt and knew and reasoned justly that if the Crown might tax the merchants, it might tax them. So they made common cause with the merchants. And all the proceedings took place, not in the General Court, not in a National Congress, but in the open Town Meeting of Boston.

We have the sixteenth and eighteenth volumes of the Boston Record Commissioners' reports, which contain a dozen or eighteen state papers adopted by the Town Meeting of Boston prior to the Revolution, from 1764 to about 1776. It seems to me that these state papers that were passed upon in the Town Meeting of Boston have never had justice done them. They are among the greatest and ablest of all the state papers in the Revolution. If we publish a volume in commemoration of the Evacuation, I hope that these papers may be reprinted, to be read by this generation and by coming ages. They are unsurpassed for legal acumen, for good sense, and for correct treatment of a very difficult subject. I commend them all to your close attention. It was my intent to read from them; but I think it will be better for you to take those volumes, volumes sixteen and eighteen of the Boston Record Commissioners, giving the proceedings of the Boston Town Meetings from 1760 to about 1776, and to read them yourselves; and after you have read those great state papers, I think, historians will not seem in condition to teach you much on the principles or the conduct of the Revolution.

You will notice that all these things were treated in Town Meeting. The Town Meeting acted officially. You will notice that always legal forms were scrupulously observed. You will notice that the men understood perfectly what they were about.

And we all know the result. They pledged their lives, their fortunes, their honor; and they paid the price. Boston went into the Revolution a Town of twenty thousand inhabitants. It came out of the Revolution, after the siege of Boston, a Town of less than three thousand. The only parallel is Charlestown. Before Bunker Hill, it had three thousand inhabitants. After the Evacuation, it had less than three hundred. Mankind was literally appalled. War, famine, pestilence, had not decimated the Town ; it was well nigh swept off the earth.

And those are the days of our glory, when one Town, to be sure the most important of all Towns in North America, defied the British Crown, and triumphed. Those were the days of our honor. From then dates the unrivalled fame of Boston and Massachusetts.

It was then, and in view of those things, that Boston has been called the Athens of America, not on account of our learning, great as that may be, nor on account of our art, astonishing, in every sense of the word, as that may be ; but because Boston was governed by the Town Meeting. And I feel almost like adding, because the Town Meeting was governed by Adams. For that reason we were called, and are still called, the Athens of America.

And it pleased Divine Providence to make our cause triumphant, because it is written in the stars that no good cause can ever wholly perish.

The greatest contribution that New England has made to the intellectual possessions of mankind is not theology ; it is not law ; it is not literature ; it is not art ; it is the New-England Town Meeting.

Think of it ! The Revolution began in the Town Meeting of Boston. The proceedings of the General Court are almost silent upon the subject. Think of it ! A Town of less than twenty thousand inhabitants hurling defiance at a new-born world power — for England did become a world power in 1763, by the treaty of Paris — and think of it, that all this was accomplished constitutionally, lawfully, in order !

You know the story when Gage went to the Selectmen in Boston and told them that he had been instructed by the Crown not to permit the calling of any Town Meeting unless he was carefully advised what the Town Meeting was going to do. " Oh," said the Chairman of the Committee, " Your Excellency need not trouble yourself about that. We have now two Town Meetings going by adjournment ; so we need not come to you to ask permission for a new Town Meeting."

Two were then going by adjournment ! The Town officers were ahead of the Crown, as usual.

Massachusetts was always ahead of the Crown. The Crown was out-reasoned, it was out-witted, it was out-argued, and it was out-lawed.

But give the Crown some credit. All these proceedings took place under the Crown. All these Town Meetings took place at a time when Boston was a part of the British Empire, of which George the Third was King. It may be, and I have a suspicion to the effect, that the Crown never found out what a Town Meeting is.

At any rate, the Town Meeting flourished. The Town Meeting did wonders. It started the American Revolution, and it accomplished marvels. And so in the other Towns. They responded well.

The militia in those days were what we might call a Province militia. The head of the Province Militia was the King's Governor. How did the Towns meet the case ? There is one of the glories of Worcester County. It invented the Minute Men. That is to say, they established an entirely new set of soldiers, who were ready to go to the front at a minute's notice,— and hence were named " Minute Men," on the twenty-first day of September, 1774, in the Court House at Worcester, Massachusetts. In order to give the thing the color of law, they ordained that, whereas the militia comprised the young men from sixteen to fifty, the Minute Men should be the men from sixteen to sixty. And so the entire establishment of the militia was quietly enrolled as Minute Men, ready to serve when and where occasion required.

And of traits of that kind there was no end. It was a time when men were bright, when everything was sparkling and stirring and beautiful.

It was in those days that the expression " sweet sixteen " arose. At that time, girls were allowed to marry at sixteen, and boys at sixteen were old enough to be enrolled as Minute Men. Hence the expression " sweet sixteen," which survives today.

All this was done under the Crown, and it was done correctly, legitimately, constitutionally. That was one hundred and twenty-five years ago. How does the case stand today? The Revolution was a great success, because we had local self-government, even under the Crown. How now?

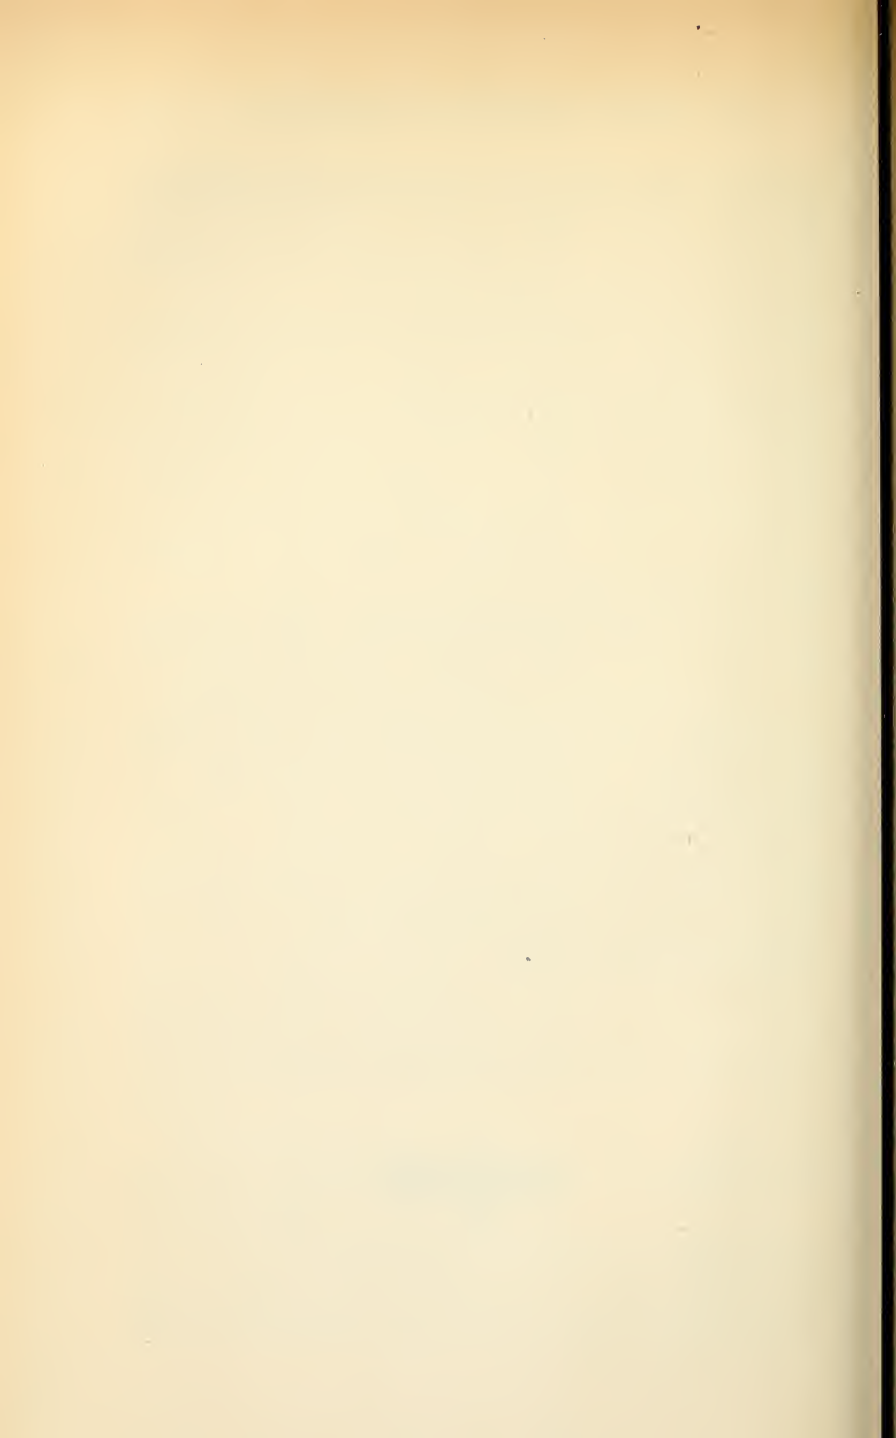

In 1816, a distinguished Chief Justice ruled that the Towns were the creatures of the State. In 1822, Boston took its City Charter, and a very distinguished lawyer put in a little clause that the General Court might annul almost anything that the City of Boston might do. Then, in 1885, the General Court said: "We have the sole power. Boston shall do this, and it shall be governed thus." Ten years later, when the City of Boston had a splendid system of water works, the General Court thought it might as well take that.

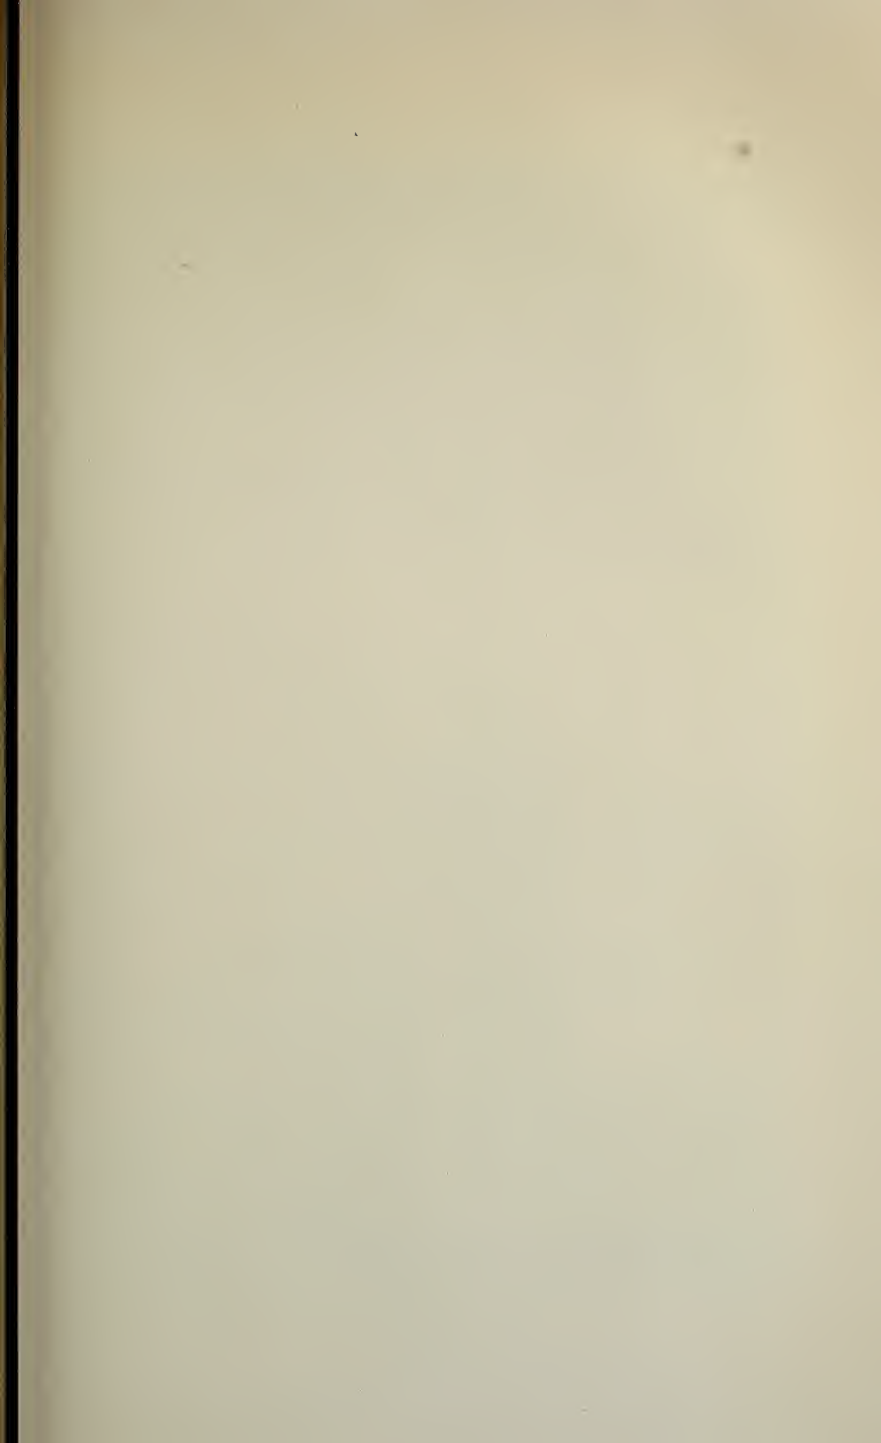

You have all heard of municipal ownership. There are those who say that in Massachusetts there is no municipal ownership, and that the State controls everything. In the Revolution, it was possible for the Town of Boston to argue with a King and a great Kingdom. Today, the legal profession tells us that Boston is created by the General Court, and that Boston cannot act except in so far as it has permission from the General Court.

I find no fault with the General Court. I find no fault with Massachusetts. But I tell you that no state, no free country, can live that has not local self-government. Massachusetts won imperishable fame when Boston had home rule.

What will the future bring?

CHRIST CHURCH.

CHRIST CHURCH AND THE SIGNAL LIGHTS.

[Read before the Society by Edward Webster McGlenen.]

OCTOBER 16, 1902.

ONE of the earliest of the centennial celebrations commemorating events of the Revolutionary War took place in Christ Church, Salem street, Boston.

On the evening of April 18, 1875, appropriate services were held in the church. A most interesting feature took place, when Samuel Haskell Newman, a son of Robert Newman (who was sexton of the church in 1775, and who it is claimed hung the lanterns from the steeple at the request of Paul Revere to warn the watchers on the Charlestown shore), passed up the aisle, lanterns in hand, climbed the belfry stair, and from the upper window of the steeple displayed the twin lights, flashing the warning that "the British troops were crossing the river," as his father had done a century before.

It was proposed to place a tablet on the church the next year, but objections were raised, claiming that it was from the Old North Meeting-house which stood in North square that the lanterns were hung, and not from the church in Salem street. The evidence supporting the claim failed to convince the committee, who decided that Christ Church was the North Church in question, and the tablet was placed on it.

Recently the old story has been revived, appearing in a guide-book and also on an insurance calendar on which a purely imaginary picture of the Old North Meeting-house was printed and making the same claim, but no new facts have been revealed. It was deemed advisable to settle the controversy beyond a doubt that Christ Church was the North Church, and further endorsing the claim by much new evidence.

The statements of the opponents, the late Richard Frothingham, Esq., and Ellis Ames, are printed in full, on which their whole case rests.

THE ALARM.

On the Night of April 18, 1775.

To His Honor, SAMUEL C. COBB, Mayor, and the Gentlemen of the City Council:

I learn from your proceedings that it is proposed to place on Christ Church a tablet with an inscription containing these words :

“From the steeple of this church was shown the lantern which gave warning of the march to Lexington.”

I beg leave to call your attention to the occurrences of the eventful evening of the eighteenth of April, seventeen hundred and seventy-five. They are related in a memorandum, without date, in the handwriting of Richard Devens, made not long after this period ; in a letter written by Paul Revere, printed in 1798, and in various contemporary authorities. As these incidents relate to the opening of the War of the Revolution, they cannot be unworthy of attention.

The setting of the lanterns was certainly an interesting incident of that evening, but the facts here stated show that it was not the only warning of the march of the British troops, nor was it the earliest warning. Then it was a private signal agreed upon between Paul Revere and Richard Devens. It is not alluded to in any printed contemporary document I have met. It is not named in Gordon's letter, printed in 1775, or in Clark's narrative, printed in 1777.

The only two authorities for the incident, Devens and Revere, name the North Church as the place. The first building used by the society in 1650 was destroyed by fire in 1676, but it was rebuilt the year following. It is called the North Church in a broadside printed in 1708. In 1714, on the petition of seventeen members to "The North Church," they were dismissed, and hence the New North Church was formed. Sermons printed subsequently, as one by Rev. T. Prince, 1732, are said on the title-page to have been delivered "at the North Church." This name appears in Bonner's map of 1722, in "The Vade Mecum" of 1732, in Price's Picture of 1743, here called "Old North meeting," and in succession in maps, almanacs, and registers to 1774. The pastor at this time—the successor of the three Mathers—was Rev. John Lathrop. A Tory rhyme on the clergy of Boston of this period has:

"And John Old North, though little worth, Won't sacrifice for gold."

This was the only church in 1775 called the North Church. "From the memorable nineteenth of April, there are no records of the Old North Church for more than a year," the Church Record says. On the 16th of January, 1776, by order of General Howe, this meeting-house was taken down and used for fuel.

This church stood in what is now North square. I have met with no more definite description of the structure than the remark of Shaw that it was "a model of the first architecture of New England." In Bonner's map (1722) it stands in the centre of the square. In Price's great picture of Boston (1743) it appears very conspicuous, the tower, with its window towards Charlestown, looming above the surrounding buildings. It stood on land a little elevated and slightly more of a hill than the surface now appears. There were in its neighborhood several gardens and unimproved tracts, but there was no elevation between the church and the ferry. Running directly from it was Prince street, having a gentle declivity towards Charlestown and to the ferry, which was located where the Charles river bridge is. Along this street were a few houses hardly higher than two stories, which could not have obstructed the view from the church. I have not a doubt that the lights of the lanterns in the window of the tower were seen by persons standing on the Charlestown side of the ferry.

The testimony to the fact is of a remarkable character. The earliest is that of Richard Devens, who was designated to call a meeting of the provincial Congress, and was subsequently the commissary general. I found the paper among his writings, and printed it in 1849. Paul Revere, in all human probability, never heard of it. In his letter, printed in 1798, he mentioned the same fact; both agree substantially. This constitutes historical evidence of a very high character. Tradition cannot stand against it.

The society did not rebuild the church. Rev. Dr. Lathrop purchased the land on which it stood. The old deed to the society having been mislaid, the General Court, Oct. 23, 1786, passed a special act relative to this church. This law reads: "Whereas the land had been in possession of Old North Church for more than one hundred years," — the society were empowered to give a valid deed. The next year Dr. Lathrop built here a residence, and here he died. A memorandum, dated 1802, reads: "Dr. John Lathrop bought the land of Second Parish on which the Old North stood." This was the time he paid for it.

Thus the name of "The North Church" is found in contemporary documents from 1802 back to 1650.

Paul Revere was a member of the society formed in 1779 by the union of the New Brick Church with the Old North Church, for in 1788 and in 1791 the parish committee of the New Brick Church held meetings at his house. He was a member of this committee in 1802. In 1816 he signed an invitation to Rev. Henry Ware to become the pastor of "The Second or Old North Church," and was in office in that church until his death in 1818. Therefore when he wrote his narrative about the lanterns he was in office in this church. Could he possibly have intended, by using the term, "The North Church" to have meant "Christ Church"?

In every contemporary authority I have cited, from 1722, the date of the formation of Christ Church, the terms "North Church" and "Christ Church" are found. Thus in Mills & Hicks' Register, of 1774, the following churches are named:

1650, North Church. 1714, New North Church. 1722, Christ Church.

In the Massachusetts Register, of 1784, the following is the record:

"Second or Old North Church, Rev. Dr. Lathrop. (The meeting-house being wholly destroyed in 1775, the members of the Second Church have since met at the church in Middle street.)"

"Church in Middle street united with the Second Church in 1779. Christ Church, Salem street."

The phrase, "Christ Church, Salem street," is continued in registers, almanacs, and histories down to the present time.

In 1791, March 10, Deacon John Tudor, of the North Church, or Second Church, left a legacy "to the Episcopal Church, in Boston, at the North End, called Christ Church." (Discourse by Rev. Mr. Eaton, p. 36.)

It is respectfully submitted that the structure called, in all the maps and registers named in this paper, "Christ Church," now standing, was not the church in which the lanterns were set; that it was not usually called "The North Church" until long after 1775, but was designated, down to the present time, — as in the Legacy of 1791 and in all the registers and histories, — by its proper name.

That Richard Devens and Paul Revere knew what they were talking about when they said that the lanterns were placed on the tower or the steeple of the North Church.

And that by this they meant to designate the structure which for three-quarters of a century stood at the head of North square.

RICHARD FROTHINGHAM.

BOSTON, Dec. 28, 1876.

NOTE.

I have permission to print the following letter from Ellis Ames, Esq. :

“CANTON, Aug. 3, 1876.

“DEAR SIR : I desire you, if you have not already done it, to read the article in the ‘Boston Daily Advertiser’ of 20th July, about Paul Revere’s signal.

“Nothing is plainer in the world than that no signal was ever hung out on that church now standing there, and long since 1775 called the North Church. The story is all a groundless fabrication ; that church was never then called the North Church.

“The signal lights were hung out on the belfry of the church, then called the North Church, standing in North square, where Doctor Lathrop then preached, and where Paul Revere then attended public worship, and which church the British troops tore down in the winter of 1775-6 and used for fuel.

“Paul Revere lived in North square, and Rev. Dr. Lathrop’s church in North square was then called the North Church. Dr. Lathrop’s church had a belfry, but no steeple, and was precisely adapted to show lights. I want to aid you in refuting the common error of supposing that Paul Revere, in extreme peril of his life, erected his signal, personally or by his friend, in the belfry of that English church, the members of its parish strongly attached to the British administration, instead of going to his own church on North square, which was perfectly safe and a much better situation for the desired signal.

“Yours truly,

“ELLIS AMES.

“HON. RICHARD FROTHINGHAM.”

PAUL REVERE'S LETTER TO REV. DR. JEREMY BELKNAP.

"JAN. 1, 1798.

"DEAR SIR: Having a little leisure, I wish to fulfil my promise of giving you some facts and anecdotes prior to the Battle of Lexington, which I do not remember to have seen in any History of the American Revolution.

"In the year 1773, I was employed by the Selectmen of the town of Boston to carry the account of the Destruction of the Tea to New York; and afterwards, 1774, to carry their despatches to New York and Philadelphia for calling a Congress; and afterwards to Congress several times.

"In the fall of 1774, and winter of 1775, I was one of upwards of thirty, chiefly mechanics, who formed ourselves into a committee for the purpose of watching the movements of the British soldiers, and gaining every intelligence of the movements of the Tories. We held our meetings at the Green Dragon Tavern.

"In the winter, towards the spring, we frequently took turns, two and two, to watch the soldiers, by patrolling the streets all night. The Saturday night preceding the 19th of April, about twelve o'clock at night, the boats belonging to the transports were all launched, and carried under the sterns of the men-of-war. (They had been previously hauled up and repaired.) We likewise found that the grenadiers and light infantry were all taken off duty.

"From these movements, we expected something serious was to be transacted. On Tuesday evening, the 18th, it was observed that a number of soldiers were marching towards the bottom of the Common. About ten o'clock, Dr. Warren sent in great haste for me, and begged that I would immediately set off for Lexington, where Messrs. Hancock and Adams were, and acquaint them of the movement, and that it was thought they were the objects. When I got to Dr. Warren's house, I found he had sent an express by land to Lexington, — a Mr. William Dawes. The Sunday before, by desire of Dr. Warren, I had been to Lexington, to Messrs. Hancock and Adams, who were at the Rev. Mr. Clark's. I returned at night through Charlestown; there I agreed with a Colonel Conant and some other gentlemen, that if the British went out by water, we would show two lanthorns in the North Church steeple; and if by land, one as a signal; for we were apprehensive it would be difficult to cross the Charles River, or get over to Boston Neck. I left Dr. Warren, called upon a friend, and desired him to make the signals. I then went home, took my boots and surtout, went to the north part of the town, where I kept a boat; two friends¹ rowed me across Charles River a little to the eastward where the Somerset man-of-war lay. It was then young flood, the ship was winding, and the moon was rising.

"They landed me on the Charlestown side."² When I got into town, I met Colonel Conant and several others; they said they had seen our signals. I told them what was acting, and went to get me a horse; I got a horse of Deacon Larkin. While the horse was preparing, Richard Devens, Esq., who was one of the Committee of Safety, came to me, and told me that he came down the road from Lexington after sundown, that evening; that he met ten British officers, all well mounted and armed going up the road."

NOTE.

Revere started on his ride about eleven o'clock, turning Charlestown neck going towards Cambridge. When near the present Somerville line two British officers tried to intercept him. He turned his horse about going by the road over Winter Hill to Medford, thence through Menotomy (now Arlington) to Lexington, reaching there shortly after midnight. He delivered his message to Messrs. Hancock and Adams, waited until William Dawes arrived, then they started up the road towards Concord and on the way were joined by young Dr. Prescott, of Concord. They had reached a point in Lincoln three and one-quarter miles from Lexington when they were stopped by the British patrol under Major Mitchell. Prescott and Dawes escaped, but Revere was arrested and detained as a prisoner for some hours, but was released later at Lexington.

[History of Paul Revere's Signal Lanterns, April 18, 1775, in the Steeple of the North Church, by William W. Wheildon, Boston, 1878.]

TRADITIONAL TESTIMONY.

MR. JOSHUA B. FOWLE, of Lexington, under date of July 28, 1875, writes to Mr. Samuel H. Newman, son of the sexton, and says: "There is no dispute, or ought not to be, in regard to the display of the lights at the North Church by your father. The Seven Bells Church was always called by that name; the others were always called meeting-houses, old puritanic names, and by no other. I knew, in my young days, many of the prominent men who took an active part in the doings of those days. Paul Revere lived near me. I have heard it told over many times and never doubted. Any man is beside himself to entertain a doubt."

"It has always been known to North End boys that Robert Newman was the man. . . . Mr. Newman was a man of few words, but prompt and active, capable of doing whatever Paul Revere wished to have done, and all these gentlemen mentioned, knew of the act of Mr. Newman's displaying the lanterns, and if it were not so they were the men to say so."

A letter from Jeremiah Loring, ninety-one years of age, dated Chelsea, October, 1876, says he was born in Hull and resided in Boston eighty-five years, "heard in his youth the story of the signal lanterns hung in the tower of Christ Church by Robert Newman, on the night of April 18, 1775, from people who were living at the time of the occurrence, and among whom I never knew the truthfulness of the statement to be questioned. Robert Newman was personally known to me."

Messrs. Isaac H. Carey, Wm. L. Learned, Thomas Mair, Noah Lincoln, and William Parkman, all old residents of Boston, testify to the same general statement regarding the place and the person. Mr. Parkman says he "often heard the story in his boyhood, and never heard the truthfulness of the statement questioned until within a week or two past."

Mr. John N. Barbour, of Boston, writes as follows: "In my early days I was deeply interested in the history of Christ Church. My grandparents occupied the house in Prince street in which my father and myself were born and lived very many years. . . . We boys always understood, in fact never heard to the contrary, that your father, Robert Newman, who lived at the corner of Sheafe and Salem streets, and in whose yard we so often enjoyed our youthful sports, hung up the signal lanterns giving information of the movements of our British enemies."

Mrs. Mary B. Swift, a resident when young at the North End of Boston, and now dwelling in Bowdoin square, at the age of eighty-four, a granddaughter of Colonel Conant, testifies that "when she was a young lady it was a frequent remark that the signal lanterns were hung immediately before the march to Lexington by Mr. Newman, then sexton of Christ Church, in its steeple, and that she never throughout her life has heard it questioned until about a year since."

Mr. Mathew Binney, under date of Sept. 26, 1876, says: "I have always claimed to be a North End boy, born Oct. 8, 1803. My home for the first twenty years of my life was the estate owned by my father on the north side of what was then Nos. 5 and 7 Salem place, since widened and called Cooper street. I have often heard in my younger days of the signal lanterns having been hung in the steeple of the Old North Church, in Salem street (or otherwise called Christ Church), giving information of the British movement in 1775. I have always heard that they were hung by one Robert Newman."

The Hon. Francis Brinley, formerly of Boston, in a letter dated Newport, Nov. 22, 1877, addressed to Mr. Geo. Mountfort, says: "My grandfather attended Christ Church . . . and I lived, as you know, within sound of the chime of bells. I frequently heard the history of the church spoken of by the senior members of the family, and have always believed that the signals were hung on the spire of the church as the most conspicuous locality. I mean, of course, Christ Church in Salem street."

Miss Maria Green, living in Weston, born in 1793, is a daughter of William Green, who lived in Boston, near the North Church, where also her grandparents resided. She heard many times from her mother the story of the lanterns, and says: "I distinctly remember that she said her father, Capt. Thomas Barnard, was engaged on that night in watching the movements of the troops in order to obtain for Robert Newman the necessary information concerning their departure. Our family were familiar with the story of hanging out the lanterns owing to the connection of Captain Barnard with it, and we never heard the act ascribed to any other person than Robert Newman or to any other place than Christ Church." Mr. Green, a brother of the lady above mentioned, who died recently in Boston, is known to have made a similar statement.

Mr. William H. Montague,¹ son of William Montague, rector of Christ Church, 1787-92, said: "I have always heard my father call the Episcopal Church in Salem street the North Church," and has also heard his father say that the lanterns which gave warning on the 18th of April, 1775, were hung in Christ Church.

Thus we have given as briefly as possible the traditionary testimony concerning Paul Revere's signal lanterns, the place where they were shown, and by whom displayed — and we may well ask, if such testimony, to which much more may be added, can be reasonably or safely rejected? This evidence, full and complete as it is, is all in one direction; supports and is supported by the account of the occurrences referred to as written by Paul Revere and printed in 1798. The testimony of Mrs. Swift, granddaughter of Colonel Conant, confirms the arrangement made with him, and that of Maria Green, granddaughter of Captain Barnard, that made with Mr. Newman, and all this, uniform and conclusive as it certainly is, while there is not the slightest authority, record, or tradition in support of the North-square meeting-house as the place where the lanterns were shown, nor the merest record or tradition, excepting that of the Pulling family (which remains to be considered), but that which, coming from ten or twelve different families, points directly to Mr. Robert Newman, the sexton, as the friend of Paul Revere, who displayed them.

Mr. Wheildon presented the facts in the case in a most able manner and his argument evidently convinced the committee, who decided in favor of Christ Church.

A portion of the traditionary testimony regarding Christ Church and Robert Newman only is used.

PAUL REVERE'S SIGNAL.

THE TRUE STORY OF THE SIGNAL LANTERNS IN CHRIST CHURCH, BOSTON.

BY THE REV. JOHN LEE WATSON, D.D.

“Now I have a story to tell, which, I think, will give a different aspect to this matter, and I claim ‘the honor of raising the signal lanterns’ for Captain John Pulling, of whom I will relate all that may be necessary to substantiate his claim.” . . .

(In support of which he presents the traditions handed down in the Pulling family.)

Mr. Deane continued :

“Since the publication of that article Dr. Watson had heard that some gentlemen here, who fully concurred in his opinion as to the agency of Robert Newman in displaying the lanterns, had some doubts as to the church itself from which the lights were shown ; that is to say, whether they were shown from the steeple of Christ Church or from that of the Old North Meeting-house, inasmuch as Paul Revere, writing in 1798, and Richard Devens, writing without date, but evidently some years after the occurrence of these events, both say ‘North Church.’ Feeling confident that Christ Church was the place at which the signals were made, and being desirous that those having any doubts respecting it should see the grounds of his opinion, Dr. Watson has written me a letter on the subject, which I now lay before the Society.

"Dr. Watson seems to me to be equally happy in establishing his last proposition, and in confirmation of his position that Christ Church was known at that period and called 'the North Church,' certainly some time before Paul Revere wrote his interesting account of the incident, I will read some extracts from an unpublished correspondence between a warden of Christ Church, in Cambridge, and Dr. Walter, rector in 1792 of Christ Church in Boston, also one from the wardens of Christ Church in Boston to a warden of Christ Church in Cambridge:

"I. Jonathan Simpson to Rev. Dr. Walter, 26 October, 1790: 'Dr. Winship and the two Wardens of the North Church in Boston have just left me.'

"II. Rev. Dr. Walter to Jonathan Simpson, Shelburne, N.S., 5 November, 1790: 'At the same time the Proprietors of the North Church were in a strange dilemma.'

'All the world (except the North Church people) consider you as engaged to us, nor must you blame us if we cannot consent to your residing with the North people.' 'I am sorry that the North Church take an undue advantage of our generosity in admitting them to an union with us. If you give up your residence among us, it is my opinion that our Church will not be connected with the North Church.' 'I see now I went too far in saying that we were willing to be connected with the North Church at all.'

"But it has been said that although Christ Church may have been popularly called 'the North Church' after the old North Meeting-house was taken down, yet it was never so called while the latter was standing.

"This is a mistake, as I will now proceed to show.

"The Rev. Mather Byles, Jr., while pastor of the First Church in New London, became an Episcopalian, and received in 1768 a call to Christ Church, in Boston, whose rector, Dr. Cutler, had died three years before. " 'REV. SIR, — The bearer hereof is Mr. Byles, a New England gentleman, was bred a Dissenter ; his Father the Doctor still a Pastor in Boston. . . . " 'J. GRAVES.' "

Perry's Hist. Coll. relating to the Am. Col. Church, III., 336.

" If not a uniform rule, certainly the general custom seems to have been, as Dr. Watson shows, to denominate the places of worship of Dissenters as 'meeting-houses.'

" I have also lately been informed that the descendants of John Pulling's second wife say of her, 'that she always called Christ Church the North Church,' and whenever she told her story of the lanterns, which she was fond of repeating, said, 'that it was from the steeple of that church that they were shown.'

" Besides that, the steeple of Christ Church was the very best place for hanging the lanterns, so that the lights could be seen by Conant on the beach in Charlestown, and also be concealed from the British, who were, mainly, in an opposite direction. Now, we compare these circumstances with those of the Meeting-house. As far as can be ascertained from any and every source, it was a low wooden building, with a small open belfry, in North square, immediately opposite the soldiers' barracks, where the troops were then mustered, with sentinels at every corner and outlet. I cannot think there is the least probability that Pulling would choose such a place, where he would have found it difficult to enter without being discovered ; or, if he succeeded in entering, and showing the lights, where they would have been immediately seen by the troops, and where they could not possibly be seen by Conant on the beach in Charlestown. It is true that all the streets of the North End were full of danger that night, but it is plain that the North square was the most dangerous of all, and it seems to me that the North Meeting-house, in the North square, was the last place that Paul Revere and John Pulling—who were not deficient in prudence and discretion—would have been likely to choose for their operations on that eventful night.

“There is much more of this kind of evidence which might be brought forward, but I will only add, at present, that some weight should be given to the fact that the two traditions, though disagreeing as to the man, yet concur in representing Christ Church as the place; and that it was the sexton of Christ Church who was suspected and arrested, ‘because the lights were shown from the steeple of that building.’ . . .

“We learn that the British authorities—military probably—when they discovered that ‘lights had been shown in the steeple of Christ Church,’ immediately instituted a search for the rebel who had committed this high-handed offence, and knowing that the keys of the church were in the custody of the sexton, and, therefore, that he was responsible for the action, by whomsoever committed, they arrested and imprisoned him.”

Historical Account of Christ Church, Boston. Delivered, Sunday, Dec. 28, 1823. By the Rector, Rev. Asa Eaton, D.D.

"it is seventy feet long, fifty feet wide, and thirty-five feet high. The walls are two and a half feet thick. The tower is twenty-four feet square, and its walls are three and a half feet thick. The spire rises to a height of one hundred and seventy-five feet, and is a well known guide for vessels entering the harbor. The resemblance to the architecture to that of churches built at the same period in England has given rise to the opinion that this church is modelled after one of the designs of Sir Christopher Wren. When the opening services were held the building was not completed. A portion of the plastering was done in 1725; the pillars were enclosed and the windows hung in 1726, and the steeple was not finished until 1740. . . .

"The lot next north of the church, on which the Academy was afterwards built, was bought of John Baker, in 1739, and conveyed to the Wardens and their successors for the use of Christ Church forever. Other lots on the north and south of the church were bought or given at various times, and afterward sold. . . .

"The bells were procured by subscription. They are eight in number. The lightest weighs 620 lbs. and the heaviest 1545 lbs. They cost 560 lbs. in England. The . . . The inscriptions on them tell their story so fully that we let them speak for themselves. The tenor, first says, 'This peal of eight bells is the gift of a number of generous persons to Christ Church in Boston, New England, Anno 1744, A.R.' The second, 'This Church was founded in the year 1723, Timothy Cutler, Doctor of Divinity, the first Rector, A.R., 1744.' The third says, 'We are the first ring of bells cast for the British Empire, in North America, A. R., 1744.' The fourth exclaims, 'God preserve the Church of England, 1744.' The fifth commemorates, 'William Shirley, Esq., Governor of the Massachusetts Bay in N. E., Anno 1744.' The sixth tells us, 'The subscription for these bells was begun by John Hammock and Robt. Temple, Church Wardens, Anno 1743, completed by Robert Jenkins and Ino. Gould, Church Wardens, 1744.' The seventh adds, 'Since generosity has opened our mouths, our tongues shall ring aloud its praise, 1744:' and the eighth concludes, 'Abel Rudhall of Gloucester cast us all, Anno 1744.' . . .

"At this time, as we learn from the letter of the Wardens, the Church was 'commonly well filled with an orderly and well behaved congregation, tho' poor,' and being situated 'at the North part of the Town where the inhabitants were not so wealthy as those near the other Churches,' they had 'a larger proportion of the poor to support by charity.' . . .

"Some remained, like their minister, true to their old allegiance; but many sympathized with the friends of liberty, and

Dr. Byles finding that an implacable spirit prevailed, communicated to his Vestry, on Easter Tuesday, 1775, an invitation which he had received to become the minister of St. John's Church, Portsmouth, N. H. The result was their parting by mutual consent. . . . The 18th of April, Easter Tuesday 1775, is a memorable day in our annals, connecting the history of this Church with that of the Nation. It was the last day of the Rectorship of a clergyman owing allegiance to the King of Great Britain. That evening, the Sexton of Christ Church, Robert Newman, sat quietly in his house on Salem street, opposite Bennett street, assuming an unconcerned look and manner to avert the suspicion of the English officers who were quartered upon him, but impatiently expecting the arrival of a friend, a sea captain, who was watching the movements of the Regulars. . . .

"Mr. Newman succeeded in eluding the vigilance of his unwelcome guests, took down the church keys, heard the news he brought, opened the church door and locked it again after him, . . .

"The twin lights from the steeple waked the fires of war and symbolized two mighty changes. The colonies became an independent nation, and the Church of England in this land is the Protestant Episcopal Church in the United States. . . . When his task was done, Mr. Newman came down, passed through the Church, jumped out of a back window, went round through Unity and Bennett streets to his house, and succeeded in entering it without being observed. The British found him in bed. They arrested him and threw him into jail. But he had taken such wise precautions that nothing could be proved, and he was set at liberty. . . .

"In 1778 the French Congregation, as it was then called, received from the American Government leave to use this church, which had been closed since the breaking out of the war, and it came very near being lost to our communion, but those proprietors who had remained in town when the British left, persuaded the Rev. Mr. Parker, of Trinity Church, afterwards Bishop of Massachusetts, to preach in it every Sunday afternoon,

'by which means,' says Mr. Weeks in his account of the state of the Church in 1778, 'it remained untouched.'

"The Church opened for divine service on the 29th of December, 1723, the Sunday after Christmas Day. The Rev. Timothy Cutler, D.D., officiated. . . . He died on the 7th of August, 1765.

"During the latter part of Dr. Cutler's long illness, his duties were performed by the other clergy of Boston. James Greateon, who graduated at Yale College in 1754, offered to act as lay reader, and his services were accepted. On the 23rd of Oct. 1759, the Wardens and Vestry gave him a letter of recommendation, addressed to the Bishop of London, requesting that he might be ordained, and appointed to serve as Dr. Cutler's assistant. Mr. Greateon went to England, received Deacon's and Priest's orders, and returned to Boston, where he arrived on the 30th of May, 1760. . . .

"Finding it however impossible to unite the congregation in his favor . . . Mr. Greateon wrote to the Secretary of the Society on the 28th of August, 1767, requesting a removal from this mission.

"They providentially heard of Mr. Mather Byles, a recent convert from Congregationalism. . . . The proprietors of this Church on Easter Monday, 1768, empowered and instructed the Wardens and Vestry to invite Mr. Byles to be their minister. . . . After his Ordination he was appointed missionary by the Venerable Society and returned to Boston, where he arrived on the 28th of September, and was cordially received by his parishioners. . . . The last baptism recorded by his hand was on the 11th of April, the last burial on Easter Eve, April the 15th, and the last marriage on the 17th. The 18th of April, Easter Tuesday, 1775, is a memorable day in our annals, connecting the history of this Church with that of the Nation. It was the last day of the Rectorship of a clergyman owing allegiance to the King of Great Britain."

"At a meeting of the committees of safety and supplies, at Mr. Taylor's house, in Concord, on Monday, April 17, 1775 :

"Present — Hon. John Hancock, Esq., Col. Heath, Col. Palmer, Capt. White, Mr. Davens, Col. Gardner, Mr. Watson, Col. Orne and J. Pigeon, committee of safety: Col. Lee, Mr. Gill, Mr. Cheever, Mr. Gerry and Col. Lincoln, committee of supplies."

Journals of each Provincial Congress of Massachusetts, pp. 513-515.

"On the 18th of April, '75, Tuesday, the committee of safety, of which I was then a member, and the committee of supplies, sat at Newell's tavern, (the records of the committee of safety say Wetherby's,) at Menotomy. A great number of British officers dined at Cambridge. After we had finished the business of the day, we adjourned to meet at Woburn on the morrow, — left to lodge at Newell's Gerry, Orne, and Lee. Mr. Watson and myself came off in my chaise at sunset. On the road we met a great number of B. O. (British officers) and their servants on horseback, who had dined that day at Cambridge. We rode some way after we met them, and then turned back and rode through them, went and informed our friends at Newell's. We stopped there till they came up and rode by. We then left our friends, and I came home, after leaving Mr. Watson at his house. I soon received intelligence from Boston, that the enemy were all in motion, and were certainly preparing to come out into the country. Soon afterward, the signal agreed upon was given; this was a lanthorn hung out in the upper window of the tower of the N. Ch., (North Church) towards Charlestown. I then sent off an express to inform Messrs. Gerry, &c., and Messrs. Hancock and A. (Adams) who I knew were at the Rev. Mr. — (Clark's) at Lexington, that the enemy were certainly coming out. I kept watch at the Ferry to watch for the boats till about eleven o'clock, when Paul Revere came over and informed that the T. (Troops) were actually in their boats. I then took a horse from Mr. Larkin's barn and sent off P. Revere to give the intelligence at Menotomy and Lexington. He was taken by the British officers before mentioned before he got to Lexington, and detained till near day."

AUTOBIOGRAPHY OF REV. JOHN BARNARD.

"I mention two signal deliverances, the one in the year 1692, in my eleventh year. I fell from a scaffold at the eaves of the old North Meeting house eighteen feet high between two pieces of timber that lay on the ground without touching them. I lay upon the ground until somebody ran to my fathers house about two hundred feet off and acquainted him with my fall."

(John Barnard, son of John and Esther, born in Boston 6 Nov., 1681.)

Mass. Hist. Col., Vol. 5 — 3^d. series, pp. 180-81.

"Some doubt has been expressed as to the building referred to by Revere in his narrative of events, printed in 1798, when he spoke of his plan of showing the lantern signal 'in the North Church steeple.' He evidently used the name which at the close of the last century (more than twenty years after the demolition of the Old North) has come to be commonly applied to Christ Church. The theory has been advanced that he meant the Old North Meeting-house, which stood in North Square, Against such a theory there are three serious objections: first. the venerable building in North Square was not commonly called the North Church, but the Old North Meeting-house, or simply the Old North; secondly, it had no 'Steeple,' but only a belfry; thirdly, it did not command a good view of Charlestown, as Copp's Hill lay directly between. Moreover, all the traditions of the North End, without exception, are that the signal was given from the church in Salem Street. The objection that this church was under English influence, and could not therefore have been used for such a purpose, disappears when we remember that Dr. Byles, its rector, was obliged to leave on the very day of the signal, on account of his Tory proclivities; and that the sexton, who is believed to have performed the deed, was one of the North End mechanics, and always in sympathy with the patriot cause.

“The city authorities, after hearing all that was to be said upon the subject, decided that this was, beyond a doubt, the place of the famous signal; and wishing to commemorate so important an event, they caused a tablet to be placed in the front of the tower, in 1878, with the following inscription:—

“The signal lanterns of

A Plan of the Town of Boston with the Intrenchments &c. of His Majestys Forces in 1775, from the Observations of Lieu^t. Page.

“The Old North Chapel, built in 1677, which was in good repair, and might have stood many years, was pulled down for fuel. The steeple of the West Church, built of large timber, was also taken down, and afforded no small supply. Many trees were cut down on the common, and in other places. The celebrated Liberty Tree furnished fourteen cords of wood. The common was much disfigured. Much of it was turned up into fortifications. Faneuil Hall was fitted up, by subscription, into a very neat theatre, under the countenance of General Howe.

The Brattle-street Church and the Hollis-street Church were improved by the troops for barracks."

History of the Siege of Boston, by Richard Frothingham, Jr.

"The setting of lanterns was certainly an interesting incident of that evening; but the facts show that it was neither the only nor the earliest warning of the march of the British troops. And it was a private signal agreed upon by Revere and Devens. These two, the only authorities for the incident, name the North Church as the place; and the church in North Square was the only church in 1775 called North Church.¹ It was near Revere's house, and was the church which he attended.² Its minister at that time, John Lathrop, was a Patriot. The rector of Christ Church, Mather Byles, Jr., was a Royalist, as were many of its communicants. The North Church had a belfry, but no steeple, and so was best adapted to show lights."

Richard Frothingham's statement, 1876.

"I, William Munroe, of Lexington, on oath do testify, that I acted as orderly sergeant in the company commanded by Capt. John Parker, on the 19th of April, 1775; that, early in the evening of the 18th of the same April, I was informed by Solomon Brown, who had just returned from Boston, that he had seen nine British officers on the road, travelling leisurely, sometimes before and sometimes behind him; that he had discovered, by an occasional blowing aside of their top coats, that they were armed. On learning this, I supposed they had some design upon Hancock and Adams, who were then in the house of the Reverend Mr. Clark, and immediately assembled a guard of eight men, with their arms, to guard the house. About midnight, Col. Paul Revere rode up and requested admittance. I told him the family had just retired, and had requested, that they might not be disturbed by any noise about the house. 'Noise!' said he, 'you'll have noise enough before long. The regulars are coming out.' We then permitted him to pass. Soon after, Mr. — (Dawes) came. These gentlemen came different routes. Revere came over the ferry to Charlestown, and — (Dawes) over the neck through Roxbury; and both brought letters from Dr. Warren in Boston to Hancock and Adams, stating, that a large body of British troops had left Boston, and were on their march to Lexington.”

History of the Battle of Lexington, on the morning of the 19th April, 1775, by Elias Phinney.

“Eight or nine officers of the King’s troops were seen just before night passing the road towards Lexington in a musing, contemplative posture, and it was suspected they were out on some evil design.”

Message sent by Elbridge Gerry of the Committee of Safety and Supplies from the Black Horse Tavern, Menotomy, early in the evening of April 18, 1775, to Hon. John Hancock at Lexington.

“A large body of the King’s troops (supposed to be a brigade of about 1200 to 1500) were embarked in boats from Boston, and gone over to Lechmere’s Point (so called) in Cambridge; and that it was shrewdly suspected that they were ordered to seize and destroy the stores belonging to the Colony deposited at Concord.”

Message sent by Dr. Joseph Warren from Boston to Hon. John Hancock at Lexington, April 18, 1775, by William Dawes and Paul Revere.

NOTES FROM THE DIARY OF EZRA STILES.

These notes are presented to show the independent spirit and patriotism of the parishioners as opposed to the toryism of the Rector Mather Byles :

D^r Byles said it was given to him, & he would have it over & above the £100.: his Congreg^a opposed this. Upon which he shut up the Chh Doors last Spring for two Sabbaths & a Fast; and at the same time engaged the rest of the Episc^o Clergy in Town not to preach for the Congregation. This irritated them highly. They applied to Commodore Gambier's Chaplain,² but D^r. Caner³ had engaged him at the Chapel, th^o the Chapel had three Ministers in Town viz. Their Resentments rose high: they said they would be priest ridden no longer; they were chhmen indeed but would have & even make a Minister of their own. Upon which they applied to M^r James Lovell Grammar School Master⁴ & offered to make him their Minister & ordain him themselves. . . . The Chh Wardens on this waited on the select Men—who answd it shd not hurt him as to the School. Upon which M^r Lovell performed divine Service in Christs Chh the next Sabbath, readg the Liturgy, omitting as he pleased, deliverd a Sermon &c. This brought Byles to himself. He immediately went Cap in hand to the Heads of the Congreg^a & told them, he 'humbly tendered them his Services in the Name of the Lord Jesus.' Upon which they received him again. Had he stood out the Congregation would have settled M^r. DIARY OF EZEKIEL PRICE.

"Friday, March 29, 1775.—Set out early in the morning and went to Boston, where a town-meeting was held for the choice of town officers. The scattered inhabitants collected together, met at the Old Brick Meeting-house (First Church, on the site of Roger's Buildings), and proceeded in the choice of the officers of the town, usually chosen at their annual March meeting."

The word "church" used in the sense of a house of public worship was then used here as in England as applying to houses belonging to the Episcopal church.

DESCRIPTION OF MAPS OF BOSTON.

A STUDY of the street plan of the North End of Boston (made from official maps of the city) shows the distance from North square (Boston), where the Meeting House stood, to the market place, the present City square in Charlestown, to be thirty-five hundred feet (3,500 ft.) measurement, and that the range line crosses Copp's hill directly over what was the highest part, viz. : the intersection of Snowhill and Hull streets.

This shows that Copp's hill obstructed any view from North square.

The plan in profile shows that the range of vision (from Charlestown square), crossing the top of Copp's hill at the present height of sixty-five feet (65 ft.), would strike North square at an elevation of ninety-five feet (95 ft.).

The grade in the square at the highest point is thirty-three (33), which would necessitate a building sixty-two feet (62 ft.) in height to reach the range line.

The Old North Meeting-House was a small structure ; the only figures as to its size are given in the autobiography of Rev. John Barnard, who said it was eighteen feet (18 ft.) to the eaves.

Judging from the size of the lot and from such description of the building as we can gather, it was, say, forty-five feet (45 ft.) long ; thirty-five feet (35 ft.) wide ; thirty feet (30 ft.) to ridge pole. The tower, in which was an open belfry, might have been ten feet (10 ft.) higher, which would make it forty feet (40 ft.), on grade thirty-three (33), making a total height of seventy-three feet (73 ft.), or twenty-two feet (22 ft.) lower than the necessary height to bring it to view.

The Old North Meeting House was originally built in 1650, destroyed by fire in 1676, rebuilt the following year, and there is not the slightest evidence that it was enlarged.

The conditions were against it.

None of the buildings erected at that time were of large proportions.

The profile shows that Christ Church on grade thirty-six (36) rises one hundred and forty feet (140 ft.) to the upper window, which is seventy feet (70 ft.) higher than the top of Copp's hill.

It is over nine hundred feet (900 ft.) nearer the Charlestown shore, while the slope of the hill towards Charter street favors it still more, as the line crosses at a sixty-foot (60-ft.) contour, proving conclusively that from either one of the three windows, the one in the brick tower or the two in the steeple, the lights could have been seen by the men watching on the Charlestown shore.

The idea that Prince street was straight is shown to be erroneous, as the range would carry it direct to Prospect hill in Somerville.

Copp's hill at the time of the Revolution was still higher.

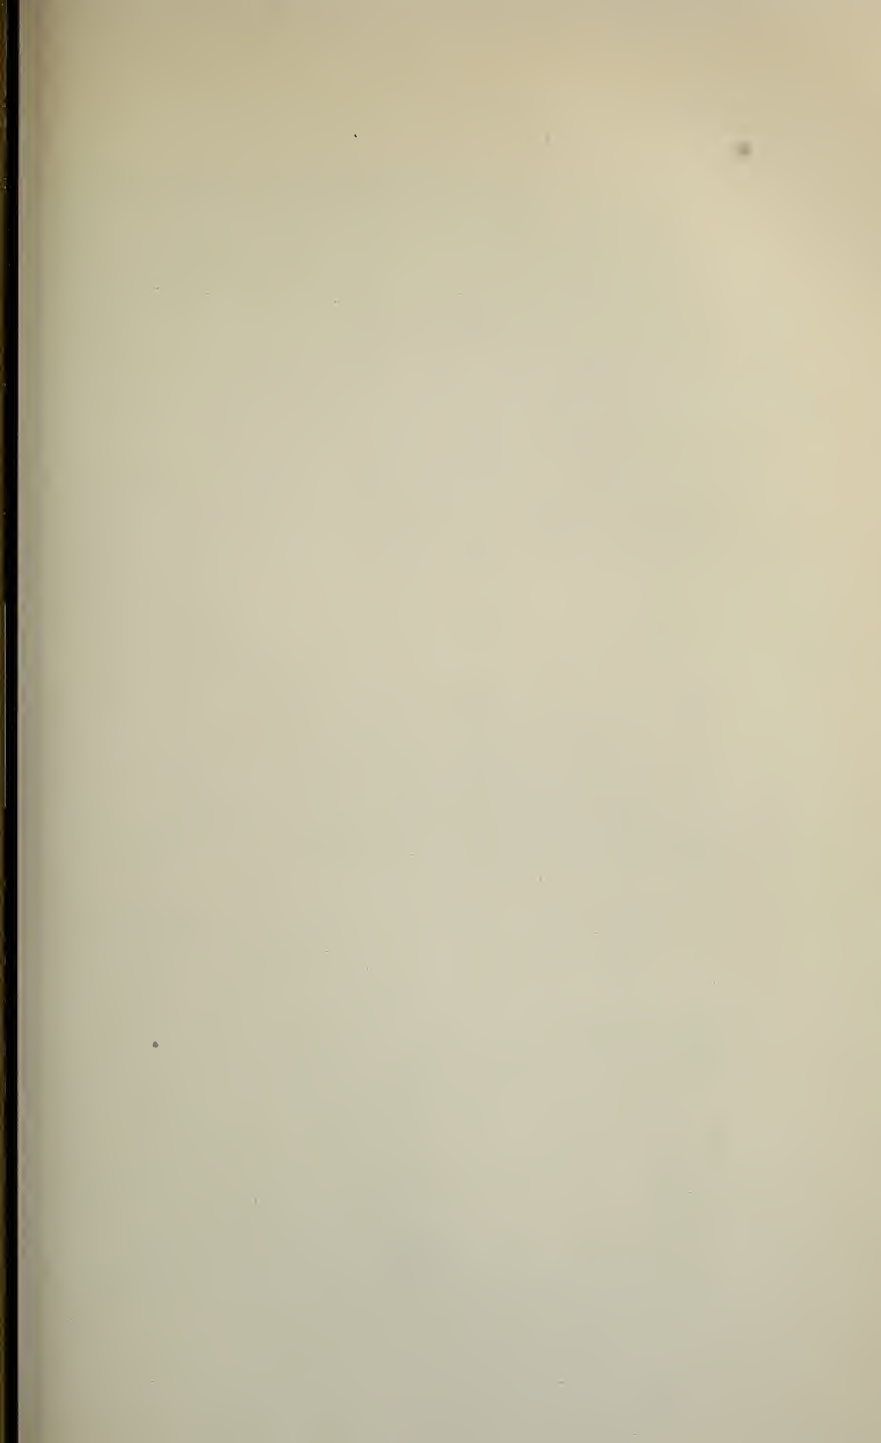

In 1806 the top was lowered some seven feet (7 ft.). The earth removed was used in filling the Mill-pond.¹

In 1828 Hull street, which up to this time had ended at the junction of Snowhill street, was carried over to Lyn street, now Commercial street. A few years later Snowhill street was cut through to Charter street. This earth was used in part to fill the Mill-pond and construct Commercial street.

I shall attempt to prove that the signal lanterns of Paul Revere were shown from the steeple of Christ Church in Salem street, and not from the belfry of the Old North Meeting-House in North Square, on the night of April 18, 1775.

The lights were displayed for the benefit of Colonel Conant and others who were watching on the Charlestown shore. There is nothing to prove that Revere saw them. It was not necessary that he should. He ordered them placed to inform the watchers (as pre-arranged on Sunday, April 16), whether the British troops were moving by land or water. He himself landed on the Charlestown side within half an hour, before any messenger had been sent to carry the news to Lexington.

His famous ride began in Charlestown square and ended in Lincoln woods, where he was captured by the British patrol.

Volumes 5, 6, and 7 of the Publishments contain the notices of Intentions of Marriages from 1759 to 1807. These were entered by the Town Clerk, which office was held by William Cooper from 1769 to 1809. The entries are nearly all in his handwriting.

From 1773 to 1776 there are several entries against which appear the words "Church," "N. Church," "No. Church," or "North Church." Most of these are found to be marriages in the records of Christ Church.

Christ Church was closed from April, 1775, until the autumn of 1778, and few entries appear in the church records.

From 1779 to 1801 there are over eight thousand publishments. Among them four hundred entries have "No. Church" noted against them. Some are not found on the town records, but a few appear as having been married in other churches. The large majority, however, prove to have been married in Christ Church. A few entries have "Chapel," "Stone Chapel," and "Chapel Church" noted, meaning, of course, King's Chapel.

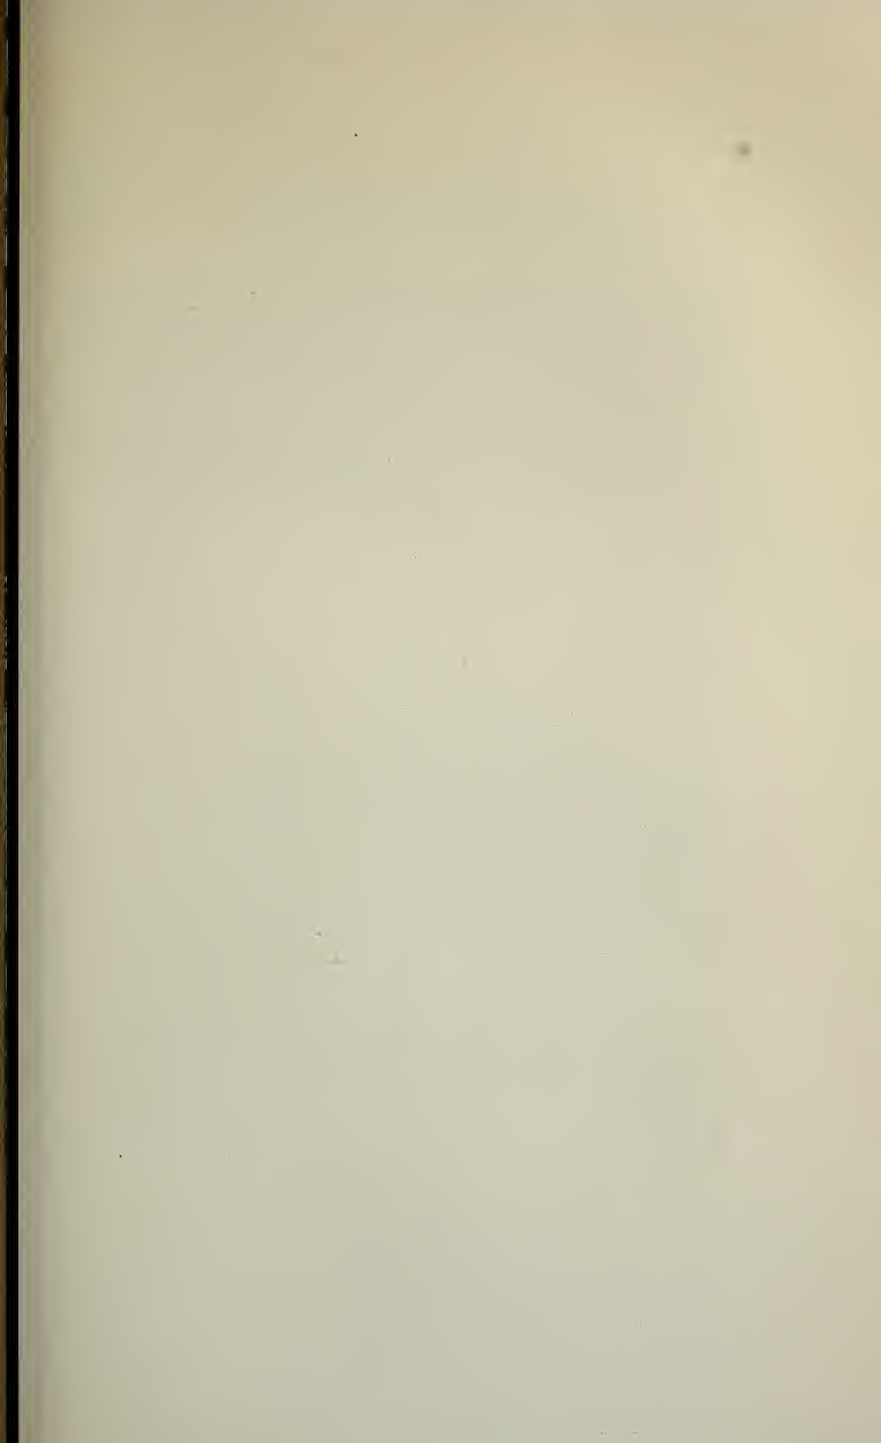

In 1790 "Roman Church," "Roman Chapel," "Roman Catholic," and "Catholic" appear against a few names. After 1800 "Trinity" is noted.

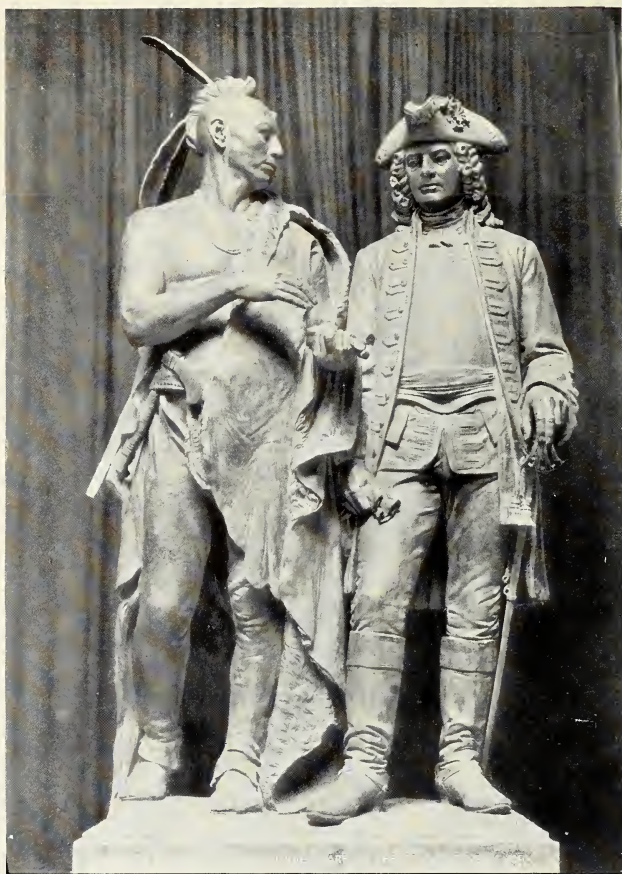

Nothing similar is found among the other entries, which seems to indicate that when parties filed their notices with the Town Clerk they requested him to post their intention in the church named, as under the old law it was necessary that such notices of intention of marriage should be published at three public religious meetings or posted in some public place within the town for a space of fourteen days.

The North (Christ) Church entries greatly outnumber the others, which seems officially to prove that Christ Church, in Salem street, was known and called the "North Church" from a time prior to the Revolution, and well into the early part of the last century. It is now probably called the "Old North Church," as it is the last and only surviving one of the three "North" churches of Boston, viz.: the "Old North" or "Second Church;" the "New North;" and "North" or "Christ Church."

It is the oldest church building in Boston, having been erected in 1723. It was and is the most northerly of all the churches, and the term "North" seems logically to belong to it by natural conditions and circumstances. This would seem to be clearly proven by corroborated records.

MEMORIAL, LAKE GEORGE.

COMMEMORATION
BATTLE OF LAKE GEORGE,
SEPTEMBER 8, 1903.

BY ARTHUR J. C. SOWDON.

THE victory of Sir William Johnson over the Baron Dieskau, Sept. 8, 1755, was commemorated by the New York Society and the General Society by the unveiling of a bronze and granite monument on the field where the battle was fought Sept. 8, 1903. The event proved to be a great demonstration in every way worthy of the Society, and attracted many distinguished guests and many thousand visitors. About a thousand soldiers were present, the procession was dignified, the literary exercises were interesting, and the weather was perfect.

For several years the New York Society had been engaged in raising the necessary funds and in considering plans for a monumental design which should fittingly commemorate the battle. One was furnished by Mr. Weingert of New York, a sculptor of merit, approved at the Chicago Exposition. The work consists of two bronze figures,—Sir William Johnson and his famous Indian friend, King Kendrik. These stand upon a rough dark granite pedestal about fifteen feet in height.

The beautiful section of country in which the battle was fought, and the lovely season of the year, made the occasion one of rare enjoyment. On the previous Saturday, Sept. 5, 1903, the great Fort William Henry Hotel began to fill up with the advance guard of the Society. The early cars brought Vice-Gov.-Gen. Howland Pell, Esq., chairman of the committee in charge, and Secretary Morris P. Ferris, of New York. Soon after came Gov.-Gen. Frederic J. De Peyster, wife and daughters. Two companies of the Seventy-first regiment New York State militia and the Glen Falls company Second N. Y. S. M. arrived and went into camp on the hill in rear of the hotel. The Society headquarters were now opened at the hotel; the building was finely decorated, many Colonial flags were displayed. In this matter the other hotels and the town followed suit. James William Beekman, governor of the New York Society, and other officials came on the later trains. The following day, Sunday, September 6, was as lovely a day as ever dawned. During the morning a troop of the Second U.S. Cavalry and a section of U.S. Artillery, who had marched all the way from Fort Ethan Allen by order of the Secretary of War, went into camp, and pitched their tents just beyond the New York Seventy-first. After church services were over many ladies and gentlemen strolled over the hill to witness the laying out of a camp by U.S. regulars. At three P.M. the Society gave a sail down the lake, on the steamer "Horicon," to members and their families, the militia, U.S. soldiers, and all who were connected officially with the occasion. At sunset many visitors went out to the camps to witness the dress parade.

Monday, September 7, another superb day. All was bustle and excitement about the hotel. Hundreds of strangers came into the little village of Caldwell to see whatever there was to be seen. The State governors were to arrive; and first came Governor Chamberlain of Connecticut and his fine staff under escort of the two companies of New Haven and Hartford Foot Guards and the troop of U.S. Cavalry, amid the firing of a salute by the U.S. Battery. Next came Governor Odell, of New York, and his large and brilliant staff, escorted by all the New York troops present, the U.S. Cavalry, and amid more gun-firing. In each case, as the governor alighted in front of the hotel, he was saluted by his escort and loudly cheered by the lookers on. About five o'clock guns announced the coming of Governor McCullough, of Vermont, Society Governor Benedict, and a party of ladies and gentlemen, and soon they arrived at the house under escort of Uncle Sam's prancing horsemen; and the cavalry had barely time to return to the railroad station before the train came in bearing Lieut.-Governor Curtis Guild, Adjutant-General Dalton, and the full Massachusetts staff. The guns poured forth their welcome, carriages were taken, and under escort of the cavalry and a fine company of militia from Pittsfield, Mass., they proceeded to the hotel. And so the hotel had become about as full as it could be. The exciting day closed with a ball, in which the State governors and their wives received, together with General Roe and wife, he being in command of all the troops. It was a pleasing sight,—the mingling of the blue and gold of the United States officers, the brilliant red of the foot guards, the black and gold of the various staff officers, with the fine dresses of the ladies.

Tuesday, September 8, Commemoration Day, opened most auspiciously. Never was a celebration favored with more perfect weather. Thousands of strangers came to town to see and take part in the unveiling of the monument, greatly augmenting the large numbers of the previous day. The first event to draw a great multitude was a review of all the troops by the State governors, which took place in front of the hotel at ten o'clock A.M. This was a fine sight, and delighted every one who witnessed it. Soon after this came President Hopkins and delegations representing the Corporation and Alumni of Williams College, which was founded by Col. Ephraim Williams, who was killed on this spot. Many members of the Society came at this time, as well as many distinguished guests—the Hon. Carl Schurz, Hon. C. M. Depew, and others.

At a quarter before one o'clock the Society sat down to lunch, the guests of the New York Society. At the centre of the head table sat James William Beekman, Governor of the New York Society, and on either side of him were the State governors of New York, Connecticut, and Vermont, and Lieut.-Governor Guild, of Massachusetts, Gov.-Gen. F. J. De Peyster of the General Society, Governor Sowdon, Governor Benedict, Ex-Gov. George E. Pomeroy of the Ohio Society, Treasurer-General Shippen, President Hopkins of Williams College, Chauncey M. Depew, General Roe, Thornton K. Lothrop, Vice-President Massachusetts Society of the Cincinnati, and others. The lunch was necessarily brief, and at quarter before two o'clock the procession was formed in front of the hotel in the presence of a great crowd of participants and spectators. Led by the cavalry and a company of the Ninth U.S. Infantry it moved on its way to the battlefield. In the first carriage were Governor-General De Peyster, Vice-Governor-General Pell, Governor Beekman, and Secretary Ferris, the flag of the New York Society being carried by a soldier on the seat with the driver. In the second barouche were Treasurer-General Shippen, Historian-General Stevens, Governor Sowdon of Massachusetts and Governor Benedict of Vermont, a soldier carrying the beautiful flag of the General Society of Colonial Wars. Next followed the State governors and their staffs in brilliant uniforms, in barouches and barges, distinguished guests, and then the Society on foot, followed by over one hundred citizens. The Albany Burgess Corps came next in its red coats and bear-skin hats, with its fine band of music. Then came Major-Général Roe and his staff, commanding the three companies from the Seventy-first and Second regiments of New York militia, the two companies of governors' foot guards, and the company from Pittsfield, Mass.

Arriving at the site of the monument, the scene was very beautiful with the fair plateau, the green mountains on both sides, the lovely lake before us, and the bluest of skies for a canopy overhead. A crowd of ladies and gentlemen had preceded us, and was in waiting for the unveiling. The day was warm, and as the Society on foot marched up the hill its members were loudly cheered. Vice-Gov.-Gen. Howland Pell presided. In the absence of the Rt. Rev. Bishop Lawrence the Rev. Mr. Brugler, of New York, acted as chaplain. Chauncey M. Depew was orator, and brief addresses were made by Mr. De Peyster, Mr. Beekman, President Hopkins, and the four State governors. It is only fair to Massachusetts to say that her Lieut.-Governor Guild was by no means the least eloquent among the speakers. As the beautiful monument was unveiled by the four governors, the U.S. Artillery fired a salute and the bands played stirring music. This Society was represented by Governor Sowdon, Secretary McGlenen, Surgeon C. M. Green and his son, Robert M. Green (elected a member later), Lieut.-

Governor Guild, Brig.-General Dewey, Colonels Capelle, Carpenter, Hastings, and Hayden; James W. Hull, J. Rogers Rich, Dr. J. W. Phelps, Levi Holbrook, W. G. Samson, H. F. Tapley (and wife), and W. R. White. There was also present a great, great grand-daughter of General Lyman, Mrs. Bryan, with her husband, James H. Bryan, Esq., of Westfield, Mass.

Most of the guests and military departed by the evening trains. The Albany Burgess Corps stopped in front of the hotel, on its way to the cars, saluted the governors, and serenaded the guests with its fine band. Lieut.-Governor Guild and the staff passed the night at the hotel and enjoyed a sail up the lake the next day on two private steam yachts. They wore bronze medals struck for the occasion by order of Adjutant-General Dalton, whose interest in the occasion was very great. Bronze medals were also distributed by the Society.

In the fight of Sept. 8, 1755, Massachusetts was represented by three regiments, commanded respectively by Cols. Ephraim Williams, Timothy Ruggles, and Moses Titcomb. Colonels Williams and Titcomb were killed in action. Major-Gen. Phineas Lyman (Connecticut), Gen. Seth Pomeroy, and Lieut.-Col. Nathan Whiting were present, and Major Ashley, Captains Porter and Ingersoll, and Lieutenants Williams, Pomeroy, Cobb, Burt, Stratton, and others were killed.

LAKE GEORGE.

1755 : 1903.

I

Dark rows of silent pine
 That front in sombre line
 The lake, whose ripples shine,
 Like silver shafts beneath the vaulted sky,—
 These are the sentinels
 Whose solemn vigil tells
 Where still the memory dwells
 Of men who bravely died in days gone by.

II

Athwart the glowing hills
 The sunlight slants and thrills,
 And the long valley fills,
 Before the dusk, with faint September haze;
 And on the night-wind floats
 A strain of far-off notes
 Of music, where the boats
 Are moored along the shore on summer days.

III

Who should believe to-night,
 Beneath the stars' still light,
 Old bloody tales of fight
 And death and nameless horror long ago?
 When from the rampart there
 Flashed the red cannon's flare
 And on the smoky air
 Came curses, cheers, and sickening sounds of woe.

IV

And yet the tale is true:
 We know how from the blue
 Dim distance a canoe
 Came down the lake to tell of danger near;
 How from their bivouac then
 The staunch New England men
 Gathered to face again
 The French, their nation's foe for many a year.

V

Up rose the placid dawn,
That mild September morn,
And found them waiting, worn
And weary, for the battle to begin;
Till burly Johnson swore
An oath he'd wait no more,
But boldly go before
And find those Frenchmen out through thick or thin.

VI

The morning sun was high,
Loud was the blue jay's cry,
As they went marching by,
All unaware, down to the deepening wood
Where Dieskau and his men,
Hid from their careless ken,
Lurked in the gloomy glen
Whose brook should soon run bright with lavish blood.

VII

For when the enfilade
From the fell ambushade
Flamed through the covert glade
Upon their column in the narrow pass,
It mowed them rank by rank,
Unseen, from either flank,
And by the water's bank
They lay in rows upon the reddening grass.

VIII

Then through the wild woodside
Stoutly they fought and died
With stubborn Yankee pride,
Retreating till the vacant camp was won,
Where, bleeding at his wound,
Brave Johnson from the ground
Cheered every man around
And cried, "We'll beat 'em yet before we're done!"

IX

The evening sun was low
When the white-coated foe
Came storming from below
Up the rude fort's ill-kept and ragged slope;
And when their last attack
Broke, and the French fell back
Shattered, the night was black,
But bright the camp with victory and hope.

X

Such was the fight they fought,
 Bravely, as brave men ought,
 And such the mead they bought
 Of noble memory that still survives.
 Yet not for storied fame
 They strove, nor for the name
 Of heroes, but to claim
 The joy of duty with their willing lives.

XI

Beside their unknown graves,
 Whose name no marble saves,
 Murmur the quiet waves
 Whose music in the sleeping moonlight thrills :
 They loved their country best,
 And in that love were blest ;
 They take their mortal rest,
 And round them are the everlasting hills.

XII

More than a century
 Of conflict has worn by
 Since here to do or die
 They stood among the hills that sober morn ;
 And all is yet the same
 For us who bear their name,
 Who come to read their fame,
 From whose unsullied stock we too are born.

XIII

Still the white mystery
 Of morning in the sky
 Creeps up and rises high
 Above the long horizon far away ;
 And still the heron's screams
 Mix with our waking dreams
 And upon us upstreams,
 Glorious as of yore, the unfathomed day.

XIV

A day of Sabbath peace,
 Full sunshine on the trees,
 And down the lake a breeze
 That breathes forever of God's purest north,—
 That makes our pulses start,
 Bids each, ere he depart,
 With gratitude take heart,
 And with a firmer faith look up and forth.

XV

The noonday shadows fail
As down the olden trail
We go, where, by a rail
Of boughs, the shaft and simple boulder tell
To all whose footsteps pass
Where, beneath waving grass,
Untimely dead, alas,
Lies gallant Williams, buried as he fell.

XVI

And where the Bloody Pool
Recalls the frenzied rule
Of carnage in the cool
Dim forest's depth that day so long ago,
The waters lie serene
Beneath the sky's soft sheen,
And by their brink the green
Vines trail their verdure and the asters grow.

XVII

The open road is white
In the dry, dazzling light,
And hot dust blinds the sight
As our procession winds across the plain
And halts upon the spot
Where once our fathers fought,
And where we gather, not
To praise them, but to live their deeds again.

XVIII

All the hot afternoon
The lengthening shadows swoon
Across the low lagoon
Where the French broke and fled that fateful day;
And through the spoken word,
Beyond the sense, is heard
A deeper thought, referred
To times and men and manners far away.

XIX

Before the dais there,
In the bright, quivering air,
Beautiful, free, and fair,
Flutter the banners of four sister States;
And high above them streams
Full in the sunset gleams
The symbol of our dreams,
The flag where star with star its glory mates.

XX

That flag they knew not then,
 Those simple, noble men,
 Nor did they know it when
 They fought and won with Wolfe before Quebec.
 They saw no vision clear
 Of victory come near,
 Theirs but the vague idea
 Of instant need, whose end they might not reck.

XXI

No mighty nation's word
 Commanded their quick sword,
 No august summons, heard
 Above all else, wakened their loyalty;
 No tried experience
 Of royal recompense
 Allured them, nor the sense
 Of union in a strife for liberty.

XXII

Then double be their praise,
 In those unconscious days
 Before our country's ways
 Lay clear, that in the darkness dared go forth
 Alone, without a friend,
 Uncertain of the end,
 Their strength and life to spend
 Against the great white power of the north.

XXIII

For France and Frenchmen meant
 To them obscure intent
 Upon the continent
 Where English laws and manners must prevail;
 And though the wilderness
 Lay vast and comfortless
 Before them, not the less
 They fought,—and faith and valor turned the scale.

XXIV

But when in after days
 They defied face to face
 The hosts of their own race
 Who sought to bind them to unjust decrees,
 French freemen by their side
 For freedom fought and died
 And set the new world's tide
 For Saxon justice, liberty, and peace.

XXV

And if, thus ignorant
Of the far-off event,
Those farmer-soldiers went
Unquestioning to meet a mightier foe,
Shall we, with fainter heart,
Falter to bear our part,
Waver when bid to start
Upon the march whose end we cannot know?

XXVI

In the soft times of peace
The battles must not cease
Which daily with disease
And avarice and crime 'tis ours to fight;
Nor must we quail before
The breeds without the Law
Who, like the French of yore,
Threaten to quench our native freedom's light.

XXVII

For private lust of gold,
For public honor sold,
For lawlessness grown bold,
Though our hearts bleed, we must not bate our powers;
And though we fear the end
And darkly apprehend
Disaster, we must bend
Our strength to guard the nation that is ours.

XXVIII

Upon a world of doubt
We must look firmly out
With faith and hope devout,
As looked our fathers in the time gone by;
However sore the fray,
However dark the day,
We must press on, nor say
Our soul fails, till we win or bravely die.

XXIX

Not ours to leave undone
The work so well begun
By them, not ours to shun
The burden of our English people's trust
But standing where they stood,
Sprung from their flesh and blood,
To keep their promise good,
To fight for others as they fought for us.

XXX

The cannon's muttered roar,
 Reëchoed from the shore,
 Startles us back once more
 To sudden consciousness of time and place;
 And as the smoke-cloud drifts
 Across the lake, and lifts
 Lazily, through the rifts
 The red sun gleams upon our waiting gaze.

XXXI

And every head is bare,
 As we stand watching there,
 While on the twilight air
 Goes up the hymn to the bright land we love;
 And as the anthem fills
 Among the templed hills,
 Our heart with rapture thrills
 To feel the presence of those souls above.

XXXII

Here, where they fought and died,
 Plunged in the crimson tide,
 Here may our loyal pride
 Leap high to tread the ground our fathers trod.
 But vain their patriot death,
 Idle our boasting breath,
 If we keep not the faith,
 Fight not the good fight for our fathers' God.

XXXIII

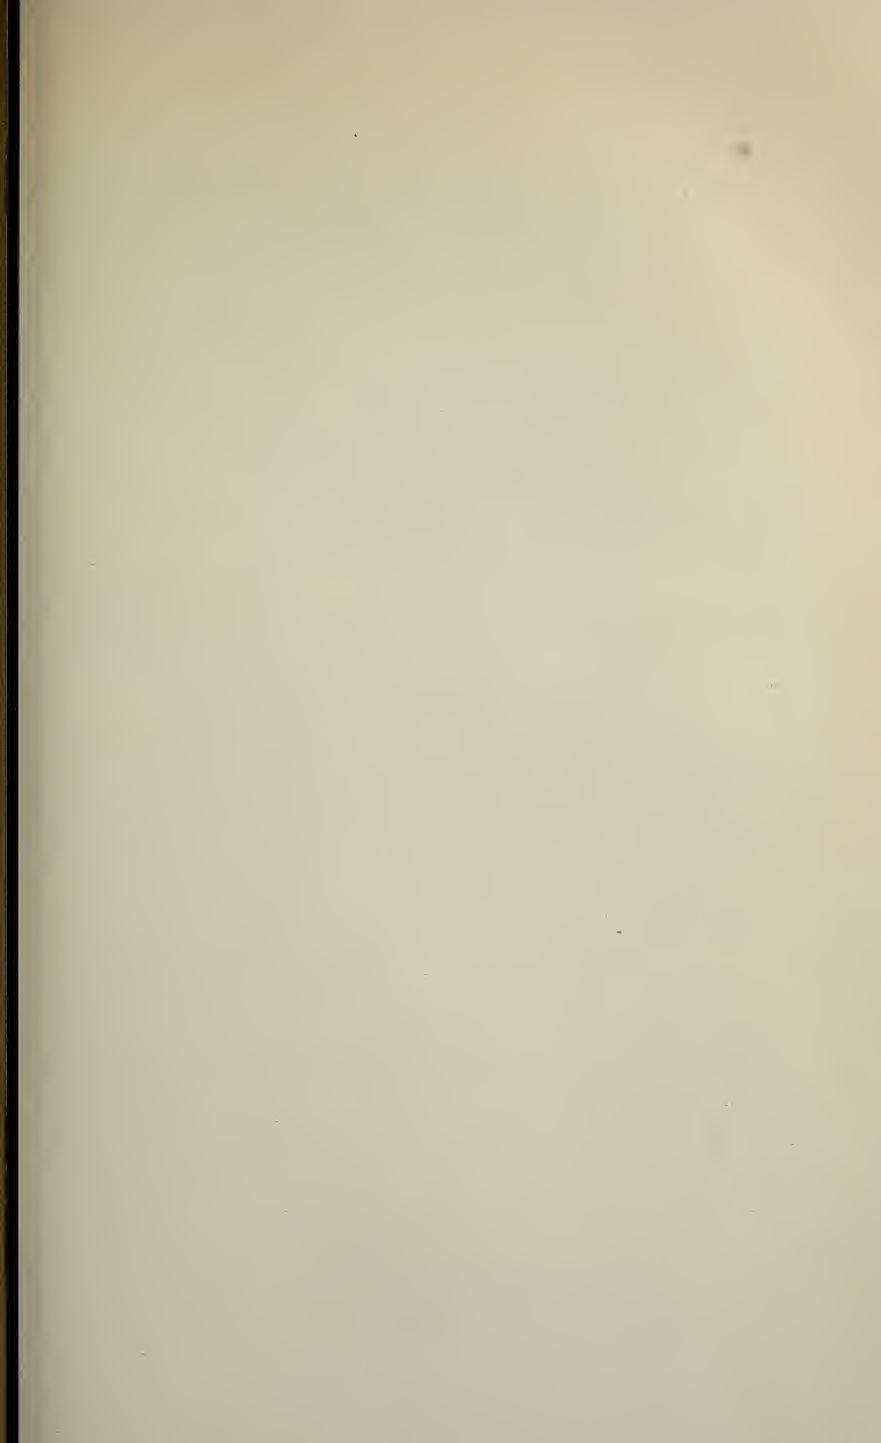

And our memorial,
 Whose manly figures tell
 The lesson they learned well,—
 That only union can make vain strength real,—
 Like the flag floating high,
 Stands symbol of the tie
 That binds our liberty,
 The union of pure hopes and true ideal.

XXXIV

The cannon's booming swell
 Breaks once again the spell,
 And thunders our farewell
 To lake and hills and visions of the past.
 Oh! may those visions prove
 Heralds of higher love
 To country, may they move
 Us to more faithful service to the last.

LAKE GEORGE EXPEDITION 1755.

WALTER KENDALL WATKINS.

IN 1746 the English were determined to make an attack on the French fort at Crown Point, but the attempt did not materialize till the next decade. General, afterwards Sir, William Johnson was charged with the conduct of an expedition in 1755. His army was made up of the farmers of New York and New England, but Massachusetts bore the chief burden of the expedition, as shown by the reimbursement of the colonies by Parliament afterward. Of £115,000, Massachusetts received £54,000; New York, £15,000; Connecticut, £26,000; while Rhode Island, New Hampshire, and New Jersey received the rest.

The Massachusetts troops were in three regiments under Colonels Williams, Ruggles, and Titcomb.

Of what men these regiments were composed is best shown by the "Beating Orders" issued to the recruiting officers at that time and I will give those sent to Ephraim Williams.

"1. You are to enlist no person below the age of eighteen years, nor above thirty-five years.

"2. You are to enlist none but able bodied, Effective men, such as be free from all bodily ails & of perfect limbs.

"3. You are to inlist no Roman Catholic, nor any that are under five feet four inches high without their shoes.

"4. You are to assure the persons inlisted they shall enter into his majesty's pay from the day of their inlistment to be paid them at their arrival at the headquarters which is Boston.

"5. You are also to assure them that they are to have his Majesty's cloaths delivered them before they enter on actual duty.

"6. Such persons as shall not choose to inlist at large you are to engage for three five or seven years, and for those who inlist for three years, I will allow twenty shillings sterling a bounty, for five years thirty shillings, & for seven years forty shillings, & for those who shall inlist at large fifty shillings apiece one quarter part to be paid at the time of inlistment & the other three parts at their arrival at the Head quarters.

"7. You are to inlist no persons but such as you can be answerable for the money you advance, as well for their being fit for the service as for their desertion before their arrival at Boston.

"8. You are before paying any part of the bounty to cause the 2^d and 6th sections of the Articles of War to be read to them & have them also sworn & attested before a justice of the peace."

A true Copy of the Minutes

W^m Alexander Sec^y.

ALBANY Dec 1st 1755

Sir

In ours of the 20th of last month we advised your Hon^{rs} of the Change of our resolutions here with respect to the Armys proceeding with the reasons of that alteration as also that by Advise of the Council we were to set out to the Lake the next morning a Copy of the determination of Council we shall Inclose . . . We have now further to inform your Hon^{rs} that we arrived at Fort Edward the 23^d at night set out early next morning for Fort William Henry on our way rec^d. a Letter by express from General Johnson informing that unless we got to the Lake that night the Connecticut forces would withdraw, soon after the receipt of this Letter we met a large number of men returning home, about 1000 mostly Connecticut Troops with a considerable Number of Invalids of our province which the Gen^l at our Instance was sending down to Albany in the Wagons, we arrived at the Camp about two o'Clock afternoon immediately waited upon the Gen^l. acquainted him with our business and desired him to call his Field Officers together that evening which he accordingly did.

As all hopes of the Armies proceeding was now at an end the first thing to be considered when we met was what Number of Troops were Sufficient for the two Forts it was the general opinion of the Military officers that the 600 agreed to at Albany was not Sufficient they had before our Arrival Setled it at 900 but now it was finally Agreed at 750 viz 430 at the upper & 320 at the lower Fort including officers to be paid & Subsisted by the respective Governments in the same proportion that was Setled at Albany to be continued in Garrison until the time of their respective Inlistments were out, & no longer, without further Order from the respective Governments. The Setling this proportion was opposed by the officers of Road Island & New Hampshire who had no Commissioners there & not well liked by the Co^mmissioners of Connecticut & altho they agreed it should be so for the present yet they all minuted their dislike of y^e proportion

The next thing was to Consider who should have the Command and in what light these forces were to be Considered whether as a detached part of the Army or a New Corps for Garrisoning the Forts, this matter had been thorôly Considered at Albany, To the first it was objected j^r. to Consider them as part of the Army was virtually to Continue & keep alive the Expedition & of Consequence the keeping the Forts at the Charge of Governments, which otherwise might be paid by the Crown To the last it was objected that if they were Considered as New Corps the officers & could have no Commissions, and that unless Gen^l Shirley would take the Forts into his own hands & Support them at the Charge of the Crown which on our Application for that purpose he declined There was no person to give out Commissions Until the Governments were Consulted & there was no time for that, so that finally as the lest evil the former was agree'd to both at Albany & at the Camp, they were Considered as a regiment of the Army Col Bagley was appointed to the Chief Command Col. Whiting of Connecticut L Col : & Cap^t Mathews of New York major— New Hampshire & Road Island to have the first and second Captains and to Serve as a Detachment from the Army by the order of Gen Johnson.

It was further agree'd that the Cap^{ts} should beat up for Inlisting the men for this Service, and that in Case of any deficiency a draught should be made out of the Troops of the Several Governments to make up their respective Quotas and that the remainder should be forthwith dismissed

While the men were raising for this service Col. Bagley expressed great uneasiness at the Appointment of Cap^t Mathews & moved that another Maj^r. sho'd be allowed which was Agreed to but there was such a division about the person it was left to Gen^l Johnson to appoint a proper person, And we hear he has Appointed Maj^r. Kinesberry in which we are the better satisfied upon the Character given him by Col. Bagley who told us he was a very good officer & much beloved by the Army (whatever others had said of him) [erased]

The next difficulty we met with was from the New Hampshire forces who refused to stay (the time of their enlistment as they said was near out) Upon this it was agreed that Cap^t. Rogers should have liberty to Inlist at Large & that such Inlistments should be Amounted as part of their Quota & the Gen^l. was desired to detach the rest out of their men.

We then acted Separately each for his own Government & Ordered the Commissarys to take a List of the Stores they had by them & deliver them to the Fort Commissary which Col. Bagley was to appoint to be used as a General Stock & the Surgeons had the same orders & to take & transmit the same to us or the Government, the Capital Instruments were to be laid up under the Care of the Col: for the Use of the province the Field officers Tents & other things the province found them (not used) they were also to deliver to the Col^o. who we ordered to send to our Commissary at Albany as soon as Opp^r would permit

We Ordered all the sick y^t were Unable to Travil into the Fort to be Lodged in Barracks & to be carefully looked after & sent home when able to return The like Orders were given at Fort Edward the whole affairs Completed & we returned to Albany the eighth day from our Setting out from whence after Settling our affairs with the Commissary & giving the Necessary Orders respecting the Stores we purpose to return homeward

Gov^r. Hopkins & Col Updike we found at Albany on our return as Commissioners from Road Island but they are too late for business

The Scituation & Strength of the Two Forts we apprehend may be best from Col. Gridley now returning to Boston — We have only to add that what further was given us in Charge we shall endeavour to execute with fidelity & dispatch we are your Honours.

Most Obed^t. Humble Ser^{ts}. In the name and by orders of the Commissioners.

James Minot

LOVEWELL FIGHT MEMORIAL, FRYEBURG, MAINE.

JUNE 17, 1904.

THE idea of a memorial to the soldiers who participated in Lovewell's Fight originated with Mr. McGlenen, the secretary of the Society. It is to his unflagging energy and persistence that the affair was a complete success in every respect.

It was decided to dedicate the tablet on 17 June, 1904, and on the afternoon of Thursday, 16 June, a delegation of the Society left Boston to participate in the exercises.

The following members were of the party :

A. J. C. Sowdon, E. W. McGlenen, W. K. Watkins, E. T. Barker, A. A. Folsom, J. A. Remick, J. S. Hosmer, Levi Holbrook, J. G. Moseley, E. W. Ricker, and G. H. Leonard ; Mrs. Barker and Mrs. McGlenen accompanied the party, as did James W. Brooks and Clarence Fiske, of Petersham, and Hon. Job Barnard, of Washington, a member of the District of Columbia Society.

The exercises at the monument on the morning of the seventeenth opened with prayer by Rev. S. T. Livingston of Hartford, Conn., at the invitation of Mr. A. J. C. Sowdon, governor of the Society. Then Mr. Walter K. Watkins, chairman of the Fryeburg Committee of the Society, unveiled the bronze tablet fastened in the side of the memorial stone facing the highway, and placed the completed work formally in the charge of the governor of the Society.

Governor Sowdon accepted the charge, with complimentary words to the efficiency and fidelity displayed by Mr. Watkins, and then in turn formally transferred the memorial to Dr. Orin Warren, president of the Lovewell Fight Memorial Association, which was recently organized under the laws of Massachusetts. Governor Sowdon's remarks were very interesting and delivered in a clear, penetrating voice. After briefly reviewing the circumstances which had culminated in the erection of this monument, he said it gave him great pleasure to place it in the charge of the Lovewell Fight Memorial Association. "We need not charge them to keep it in good condition, and I hope that the lot may be made attractive by trees, grass and flowers, that children may love to play there, and drink in the spirit of patriotism and devotion to their country."

Dr. Warren replied in graceful language. He said as the representative of the society that has been formed for the purpose, he would accept the gift of the monument and the lesson that is taught by it. "We will agree to keep this memorial in a fitting manner, and make this spot a favorite place for all to visit. We recognize our great debt to those brave men who lost their lives here, and our hearty thanks are given to the society which has placed this monument here, and have now placed it in our keeping."

A group photograph was then taken by Bert Whitmore, of Fryeburg, after which the party proceeded to the lower cemetery in the village, where E. W. McGlenen, secretary of the Society, placed an ivy wreath and a flag upon the grave of Gen. Joseph Frye, the founder of the town of Fryeburg, who died July 23, 1794, at the age of eighty-three. Mr. Whitmore took another group picture at the general's grave.

At one o'clock the members of the Colonial Society with Hon. James P. Baxter, of Portland, Seth W. Fife, Esq., and A. F. Lewis, Esq., of Fryeburg, as guests, sat down to an excellent dinner in the private dining hall of The Oxford. Upon the outer cover of the bill of fare was a representation of the seal of the Society.

The afternoon exercises were held at three o'clock in the Congregational Church. The auditorium was well filled with the village people, who listened to the various speakers with strict attention, and often manifested their approval of the sentiments expressed by liberal applause.

Gov. A. J. C. Sowdon presided. Prayer was offered by Rev. A. T. Petts, pastor of the church. The opening remarks were made by the presiding officer who spoke interestingly and forcibly. He was followed by Dr. Orin Warren, a son of Fryeburg, who made many good points which were highly appreciated. Then James P. Baxter, Mayor of Portland, and president of the New England Historic-Genealogical Society and of the Maine Historical Society, was introduced. He was given profound attention, especially at the close, when he read a poem written by himself when in Fryeburg some years ago.

MAYOR BAXTER'S ADDRESS.

Could we have stood here one hundred and seventy-nine years ago how different would have been the scene before us. Instead of this quiet village of pleasant homes; these cultivated fields and outlying farmsteads, the thrift and industry of a Christian community, we should have beheld a cluster of frail wigwams, a few patches of land under the rude cultivation of a savage people, and great forests whose bounds had never been explored by man. Through them not only prowled the supple savage whose moccasined feet made no sound, but wild beasts innumerable, of which no trace now remains.

The whole world then was unlike our world of to-day. The steam-engine had not been thought of, and transportation was mostly on foot or by boat. But few public roads existed even in New England, and almost none in Maine.

Superstitious beliefs dominated the thought of the time. One who dared to doubt even the existence of witches was dangerously near being a pestilent sceptic, who a few years earlier would have expiated his fault on the gibbet. . . . How would such people have regarded the telephone, the telegraph, and, especially, the phonograph, with its ghostly voices, which even after one becomes familiar with them seem uncanny? Men were then contented with modes of life which we should regard now as indicative of extreme destitution. Although having an established government and living under the protection of its laws, their lives and property were never safe, owing to savage enemies who suddenly appeared and vanished like some awful spectre, who revelled in terror and death.

It had become a fixed belief with the white colonists at the time of which I speak that if they would rear their families in safety these "wolves with men's brains," as the pious Mather styled them, must be exterminated. The government was too poor to keep regular armies in the field to punish its elusive enemies, and so it enacted a law to pay men according to their efficiency in exterminating them, and a few, who were applauded by their contemporaries as the truest of patriots, accepted the terms, and went forth to the conflict. We may well imagine the gathering of these few brave men under Lovewell, and their departure from Dunstable in the early spring, when the fields were just beginning to show their tender verdure, and their neighbors were busy preparing their lands for planting; and how their hearts were stirred by the sad farewells of their relatives and the enthusiastic plaudits of their friends, who watched them with straining eyes as they wound away over the hill until they disappeared from view. We can follow them upon the tedious march, on which some fell sick by the wayside and could go no further; the encampment at Ossipee and the anxious council of war of the constantly weakening company, now in the enemy's country; can hear the ring of their axes as the trees fall and the little fort goes up, which is to afford them shelter in case of disaster and retreat; can follow their cautious approach to the stronghold of the terrible Paugus and his savage band, and witness the deadly struggle which, at one time, seemed to have been decided against them; the offer of quarter by the treacherous foe, which meant only death by prolonged torture; the fresh onset; the retreat and the final victory which, measured by the loss of brave men, might well be called defeat. It requires no vivid imagination to picture these scenes so graphically described in the simple account of the ancient chronicles. They are too picturesque indeed to fail to arouse the imagination of the dullest reader. I know that critics have condemned such attacks as this of Lovewell upon the savages ; but I think that they fail to take everything into their account. To me it seems that it had become a question of killing a few score savages or a much greater destruction of life, as well as of property. I am satisfied, too, that several of the actors in this stirring drama have not been awarded that meed of praise to which their heroic actions entitled them. Something to the heroism of the men of the intrepid : Somers, Wadsworth, and Israel in the Tunisian war ; of Cushing in the Civil war ; of Hobson in the late Spanish war ; and of the Japanese Hirose, inspired these men, who went into the wilderness to meet the most dangerous of foes, knowing that they must be so entirely cut off from help in face of defeat, or even sickness, that death would be almost certain. And then consider individual cases, that for instance of Robbins, who, finding himself so severely wounded that he could not retreat, asked to have his gun charged, that when the savages came to scalp him he might kill one more of them ; of Frye, a young man of " Liberal education " as the chronicler describes him, who, when mortally wounded, prayed for the success of his comrades ; of Farewell, Davis, Jones, and Lovewell himself, who not only showed heroic fortitude but unselfish devotion to the cause they had espoused. Let the heroes of Pequawket hereafter receive the meed due them, for their story forms a notable page in our history. I have often roamed over this historic ground and conned the story of Lovewell's fight, and repeopled the scenes of the past, while the varied sounds of the distant village have been blown to my ears, and like many others have tried to put my thoughts into rhyme. May I close these brief remarks with such a rhyme, fashioned at the foot of Jockey Cap, which, after it has served my present purpose, may go the way of much poor poetry on the subject.

Hark ! hark ! heard you not where the pines cluster thickly,
A noise like the movement of moccasined feet ?
As if through the shadows stole softly and quickly,
One ever expecting some foeman to meet ?

'Twas only the wind as it stirs the gray birches:
Or wing of a bird as it flits through the wood,
High up where the hawk in security perches,
A sentinel guarding the home of its brood.

But, surely, you heard, where, like ghosts softly trailing
Their robes, stalk and mists on the pond's hither shore,
A cry like a war-whoop, twixt laughter and wailing,
Which a thrill to the heart like a swift arrow bore.

'Twas only a bird to his mate strangely calling
From out the gray mists, where he floats all alone;
While eve's gentle spell on the landscape is falling,
Whose beauty the day called with joy, all it's own.

Never more shall the gay beaded moccasin lightly
Imprint the scant turf beneath the dark pines;
Nor the war-whoop be heard, where so strangely and whitely,
The moon like a face on the calm water shines.

Where the Indian maiden met shyly her lover,
Her tryst the fair Saxon keeps faithfully now;
With the same yearning stars throbbing softly above her,
And the same moon discreetly to list to her vow.

Where the wigwam once stood on the bloom-sprinkled meadows,
Above the broad elms the white church spire beams;
And the voice of its bell calling out from the shadows
Like the voice of an angel lures sweetly to dreams.

Remarks followed from Emerson L. Adams, principal of Fryeburg Academy, Dr. Seth C. Gordon, of Portland, who owns an elegant summer residence in this town, of which he is a native, Hon. Job Barnard, of Washington, D.C., Mr. Walter A. Robinson, master of the Boston Latin School, Mr. John S. Barrows, and Hon. William W. Towle, of Boston. The last three are also natives of Fryeburg.

Next morning the visiting society enjoyed a carriage drive to the many points of interest about the town, leaving for North Conway on the 3.05 P.M. train, thence for Boston, which they reached at 9.30.

BIOGRAPHICAL SKETCHES OF ANCESTORS.

JEAN PAUL MASCARENE.

BY PAUL MASCARENE HUBBARD.

Jean Paul Mascarene, or, as he was usually called, Paul Mascarene, was born near Castres in the province of Languedoc, France, in 1685. His father, who was a prominent Huguenot, was at this time in hiding to escape persecution, it being the year of the Revocation of the Edict of Nantes. In attempting to escape, both his parents were captured and his father finally sentenced to banishment for life, in fulfilment of which he went first to Geneva and later to Utrecht.

After his father's sentence and departure, Paul was placed in the care of his grandmother Mascarene. His mother returned to the Roman Catholic faith, and appears to have had nothing further to do with him. Despite the separation, he continued in touch with his father and, so great was his love for him, that at the age of eleven he made up his mind to go and share his exile. Aided by an uncle and an old family servant he crossed the Rhone in November, 1696, and then made his way over the Alps alone and in winter. He reached Geneva in December of the same year only to learn that his father had left, but providentially he found a relative who received and cared for him.

Mascarene remained in Geneva for some time, but at length set out again in search of his father. He reached Utrecht in 1698, just two days after his father's death. His cousin, Papin de Thoyras, the historian, was then living in Utrecht. With him he found a home and it was undoubtedly through his influence that he obtained a lieutenancy in the British army in 1706. This was the turning point of his life.

In 1709 Mascarene was ordered to America and accordingly set sail for New York. Adverse winds compelled the ship to touch at Boston in April, 1710. Here sickness detained him and, as it was too late, when he recovered, for him to be of service in New York, he began to recruit and drill an artillery company, using Boston Common as a manœuvring ground, throwing up entrenchments for the purpose.

In July of 1710 he was commissioned captain and accompanied an expedition which effected the conquest of Nova Scotia. He was there made major, and passed the following winter in and about Annapolis in the execution of orders.

In 1716 he went to England and received his commission as senior captain in the new Fortieth Regiment in 1717. He returned to America, and in 1720 we find him at Annapolis, third in rank, in the council. He was made engineer and set about the repair of the walls of the fort, and also found time to make a topographical expedition.

One of his most important services was that rendered in 1725-26, when he served as commissioner from Nova Scotia to negotiate a treaty between New England, Nova Scotia, and the Eastern Indians. The negotiations were successful, and a treaty ratified which was productive of a long peace. From this time until 1739, Mascarene spent a good deal of his time in Boston. In that year the lieutenant-governor of Nova Scotia committed suicide and Paul at once repaired to Annapolis, assumed the vacant office, and performed the duties attaching thereto. He was not the commanding military officer, and this fact caused him a vast deal of trouble and annoyance. The death of lieutenant-colonel commanding, in 1742, ended all this, for thereby Mascarene became lieutenant-colonel and both civil and military head.

On March 20, 1744, war was declared between France and England. The news was conveyed to the French in Cape Breton by a swift ship and the governor, M. du Quesnes, who was aware of the unpreparedness of Annapolis, both as regarded the fortifications and the garrison, despatched thither a party of French and Indians under Le Loutre. The first intimation which the English received of the war was the murder of some privates by Indians just without the fort.

Despite the distressing conditions Mascarene refused to surrender the fort, and sent an urgent appeal for aid to Massachusetts. In the meanwhile the French not being reënforced, as expected, withdrew to Minas. At this juncture Canso surrendered to the French, who were now able to send aid to Le Loutre under the command of Du Vivier. He did not make much headway, however, as he had no artillery, whereas the fort was provided with some forty cannon. On July 3 help arrived from Massachusetts, and the French despairing of success raised the siege. Thus Mascarene by his courage and pluck and in face of dissention in his camp, for most of his subordinates favored surrender, saved Annapolis for the English. It seems a small affair now, but its results were momentous.

In 1751 Mascarene sold out and came home to Boston. In 1758 he was gazetted major-general in the British army, and died Jan. 22, 1760. It is interesting to note in closing that his house was on School street where the Niles Building now stands.

LIEUT. JOHN TRACY.

BY JOHN GRAHAM MOSELEY.

Lieut. John Tracy, son of Stephen and Trifasa Tracy, was born in Plymouth, in 1633, married in Duxbury, Mass., Mary Prence, daughter of Gov. Thomas and Mary (Collier) Prence, his second wife, who was a daughter of William Collier, one of the principal adventurers who furnished the funds to establish and carry on the Plymouth Colony and came there about 1632, settled in Duxbury, was prominent in the affairs of the Colony, and died there in 1670.

Lieut. John Tracy was a prominent and influential man in the affairs of the Colony, as appears by the Plymouth Colonial and Duxbury Town Records, in which his name very frequently appears between the years of 1656 and 1701.

At a general court held at Plymouth, June 3, 1656, he was appointed one of the surveyors of highways for Duxbury, and at the same court was propounded as a Freeman.

At a court of elections held at Plymouth, June 3, 1657, he was admitted a Freeman and in the same courts in 1658 was sworn constable, which Winsor in his History of Duxbury says, "was an office of high trust and responsibility and none were elected to it but men of good standing."

Served frequently on the grand and other juries, often being foreman. Oct. 29, 1672, was one of the persons appointed by the general courts to see to the execution of the orders of the courts prohibiting the transportation of lumber out of the government, order dated June, 1672.

June, 1677, was chosen selectman for Duxbury, and was reëlected to the same office every year (except in 1679 when he was surveyor of highways) for fourteen years to 1692.

In 1682 he was ensign of the Duxbury military company, and Oct. 2, 1689, was appointed lieutenant of the same company, then under command of Capt. Jonathan Alden.

In 1683 he was chosen deputy from Duxbury to the general court, and was again chosen deputy in 1684, and in 1686.

In 1684 he was appointed on the committee for settling the bounds between Duxbury and Marshfield. In 1685 he was appointed to run farm lines in Scituate, and also frequently, until 1702, to lay out land in Duxbury.

He appears to have been possessed of a large property, for in 1700 to 1702 he made conveyances of a large amount of real estate situated in Duxbury, Plymouth, Marshfield, Bridgewater, and Middleboro. That in Duxbury was conveyed Dec. 30, 1702, to Thomas Loring, and is described in the deed as being "all my farm in Duxbury about 80 acres and the buildings &c.," and this was probably the homestead inherited from his father, Stephen Tracy, who, in a document executed in London, Eng., March 20, 1654/5, empowering John Winslow to make a division of his estate in New England, directed that his son John should have what land and houses he had in Duxbury. This land was granted to Stephen Tracy by the Colony Nov. 2, 1640, and is described in the records as "80 acres of land with some meadow to it in Duxbury." Soon after the sale of his real estate Lieutenant John removed to Windham, Conn., where he died June 30, 1718.

His son Stephen, born at Duxbury about 1673, married at Windham, June 26, 1707, Deborah Bingham, daughter of Dea Thomas and Mary (Rudd) Bingham.

Deborah Tracy, daughter of Stephen and Deborah (Bingham) Tracy, was born at Windham, Conn., Jan. 8, 1714, married May 7, 1735, Increase Moseley. Two of Stephen Tracy's sons, James and Prince, were officers in the First Connecticut Regiment under Major-General Phineas Lyman in the campaign of 1755.

STEPHEN TRACY.

BY JOHN GRAHAM MOSELEY.

The earliest authentic record of Stephen Tracy that has been found is in the marriage records at Leyden, Holland, where it appears as number thirteen in the list, and last of the forefathers or of those who came over in the first four ships, "Mayflower," "Fortune," "Ann," and "Little James," and is as follows: "Intention published December 18, 1620. Married January 2, 1621. Stephen Tracy, saymaker, young man from England, accompanied by Anthony Clemens, with Trifasa

Le . . . maid of England accompanied by Puce Jennings." "An old manuscript in the possession of Mr. A. H. Tracy, of Chicago, gives Stephen Tracy as a son of Samuel, a son of Sir Richard, and speaks of him as a cousin of Lieutenant Thomas."

Stephen Tracy with his wife Trifasa and his daughter Sarah, born in Leyden, Holland, in 1622, came in the "Ann," Capt. William Pierce, to Plymouth Colony, arriving in the summer of 1623.

Previous to 1623 all the products of the Colony, in accordance with a contract with the adventurers, had been turned into a common stock, and been distributed to the colonists according to their needs, but it was found that under this system there was not enough corn produced to supply their needs; consequently there was much suffering among them for a portion of the year, so the governor and leading men of the Colony, after serious consideration, decided to take the responsibility of allotting to each head of a family one acre of land for each member of the family to be cultivated for their own "particular."

There being three members in the family of Stephen Tracy, he was that year allotted three acres of land on the south side of the town.

May 22, 1627, he had shares for four heads in the tenth lot, in the division of cattle, having had a daughter (Rebecca) born in Plymouth previous to this division.

In 1633 he was made a "Freeman of the Incorporation of Plymouth, New England." March 25, 1633, was rated for public use "18^s payable in corn at 6^s pr bushel," and was rated the same in 1634. This was as large a rate as was paid by any of the settlers.

July 23, 1634, he was appointed by the general court one of the committee for laying out highways for Duxbury, and he probably became a resident of that town that year, and was one of its first settlers.

March 3, 1634/5, was added to the governor and assistants "for the ceasing of men for the public charge of this present year." March 14, 1635/6, was appointed on committee of Duxbury to meet committee of Plymouth and together establish a line between the two towns, at the same date was assigned mowing land in Duxbury.

Was constable in 1639, which at that date Winsor in his History of Duxbury says: "was an office of high trust and responsibility, and none were elected to it but men of good standing." Served as one of the committee of five for Duxbury side, to select a site for a meeting-house.

Served as a grand juror in 1639, 40, 41, 42, and was arbitrator by order of the governor and assistants in 1638 and 1642.

Nov. 2, 1640, was granted "80 Acres of land with some Meadow to it in Duxbury." He was frequently appointed on committees for assigning and laying out land. Was made a Freeman of Duxbury in 1646.

He returned to England before 1655, for in Plymouth Colonial Records, Vol. 2, of Deeds, Folio 179, is recorded a Power of Attorney to John Winslow empowering him to dispose of his property in New England to his five children in that Colony. It is dated at London, March 2, 1654/5, he calls himself of Great Yarmouth, a seaport borough and market-town in Norfolk County, England.

ADVERTISEMENT.

I Herewith offer to the Public a visible Representation of two of the Engagements the English had with the French, on the 8th of last September, with explanatory Notes ; by the help of which any one, who will be at the Pains to compare what is said under each Figure with the corresponding Figure in the Prospective Plan, may easily be let into a clear Idea of this whole Affair.

The Representation I have given, whether as appearing to the Eye in this Plan, or to the Mind in the descriptive Notes, contains the real Truth. I was myself present in the Camp ; and tho' I could not be in the Front, and Rear, and on either Wing, at the same Time, yet being an independent Person, not belonging to the Army, I had, it may be, as good an Opportunity, as any Person whatever, to observe the whole Management on both Sides ; especially as I took my Post at the Eminence where the Field-Piece was planted, from whence I could, with Advantage, view the Action, in all it's Parts, from the Beginning to the End of it : Tho' I must confess, the thick Smoke, which arose from the discharge of so many Guns on both Sides, rendered the Sight less clear than I could have wished ; and I was often interrupted by taking Care, that the Guards, beginning at the above Eminence, kept to Order, and attended their Duty. I have not therefore contented myself with my own Observations, but made it my Business to converse with those, at the Camp, who were most capable of enabling me to give a fair and full Account of the Transactions of this memorable Day. After all, I may have fallen into some smaller Mistakes ; tho' I am not sensible of any such. I am sure, I have no sinister End to serve, nor do I know of any Thing that should bias me to vary in the least from the Truth of Fact.

As to the Fight of the Detachment of which Col. Williams had the chief Command, I am beholden to others, but of the best Character in the Army, for the Account I have given of it ; and I received it immediately from their Mouths : Tho' I was myself well acquainted with the Ground upon which they fought, and viewed the Dead as they lay after the Battle was over.

What I have said of the last Engagement also, in which a Party of our Men from Lyman's Fort drove off the Ground, and routed, double the Number of the Enemy, I had from those that were present at it, best able, and most disposed, to represent the matter as it really was.

As the Action near Lake GEORGE is the greatest, in it's Kind, that ever happened in NORTH-AMERICA, it is hoped, the Prospect, and Account, here given of it, will not be unacceptable, unless to those who don't wish well to his Britannick Majesty's Interest in these Parts of the World.

Boston, November 10th. 1755.

Samuel Blodget.

AN EXPLANATION of the PROSPECTIVE-PLAN
of the BATTLE near Lake GEORGE, September 8. 1755 :
Containing a full, tho' short, History of that important Affair.

N. B. The Figures 1. 2. 3. &c. answer to the same Figures, as they are placed on the Prospect, and explain what is there represented to the Eye.

The first Engagement.

THE Road from the Camp to Lymaw's Fort, in which Road a Detachment of 1000 English, and about 150 Indians, with Hendrick the Mohawk Sachem among them, were marching in order to annoy the Enemy, who, it was supposed, were attacking the Fort, or retreating from it.

2. The Form in which the French and Indians appeared, being like that of a Hook ; for so they had placed themselves, extending a curve Line from their Front on each Side of the Road, near half a Mile on the Right, and about one half that Space on the Left. They had Opportunity to do this, as they had received Intelligence from a Scout they had sent out, that a considerable Body of our Men were marching in order to oppose them. The Reason of their thus forming themselves was this ;---on the Left of the Road, all along the Line they had placed themselves in, they had the Advantage of being covered with a thick growth of Bush and Trees, such as is common to swampy Land as this was : On the Right, they were all along defended, as with a Breast-work, by a continued Eminence filled with Rocks, and Trees, and Shrubs as high as a Man's Breast. Our Men, while marching in the Road, were within 150 Yards of the En-my, who lay invisible on either Side. They had posted themselves in the most advantageous Place there was between the Camp and the Fort for an Ambuscade. And considering this, together with their great Superiority in Numbers, being upwards of 2000, 'tis a wonder they had not entirely routed and destroyed this Detachment. Our Men must have behaved with the utmost Bravery, and Wisdom too, or they could not have made so honorable a Retreat, killing even more of the Enemy, than they lost themselves ; as the French General owned, after he was taken : Tho', in this Fight, which began about two Miles and an half from the Camp, our loss, both of Officers, and private Men, was much greater than in the other Battle.

3. Hendrick, the Indian Chief, or King of the Six Nations, who was dressed after the English Manner. He only was on Horse-back, because he only could not well travel on Foot, being somewhat corpulent as well as old. He fell in this Fight, to the great Engragement of the Indians, and our loss ; as he was a very good Friend to the English, and had most Influence to keep the Mohawks so.

4. Our Men represented as breaking their Order, and hastily running. Their Design herein was to gain the Advantage of the Eminence on the Right ; but the Enemy having un-unhappily got the Possession of it, rose up from the Rocks, and Shrubs, and from behind the Trees, when our Men came within sure Reach of their Guns, and made a considerable Slaughter among them. The Trees were thinly scattered where our Men were thus fired upon, and the Shrubs but low : However, they made the best use of them they could, and continued Fighting here for some Time with the greatest Resolution. The greater Part that were killed in this Fight, whether of the Enemy, or of our People, were found the next Day at this Ambuscade, or not far distant from it ; tho' they lay scattered more or less all the Way to the Camp.

5. An advanced Party of Indians, who first discovered the Enemy, and fired upon them ; which gave the Alarm to our Men, began a very furious and desperate Fight, and led the Enemy, by our Retreating from them, into the Engagement they afterwards had with the Army at the Camp.

The second Engagement.

6. The Appearance of the Canadians and Indians, as they made their approach to our Camp, and began their Fire within about 140 Yards of the Breast-work (such as it was) about it's Front. It is to be noted here, after the first Fire, both the Canadians and Indians became invisible to our Men, by squatting below the under-growth of Shrubs, and Brakes, or by concealing themselves behind the Trees, only when they rose up with their Heads above the former, and discovered Part of their Bodies from behind the latter, in order to make their Fire after they had charged their Muskets.

7. A View of the Regulars, supposed to be about 4 or 500, drawn up in Order, and beginning their Fire in Platoons : Tho' it is to be observed, they kept their Order but a little while ; for after the Discharge of our Cannon once, or twice at most, they went into the Indian Way of Fighting, squatting below the Shrubs, or placing themselves behind the Trees. And indeed, had they not done thus, they must all have soon been destroyed ; as our People took sight, and were all good Mark's-men.

8. The Road we had cleared, leading from the Camp to the Fort at the Carrying-Place. And this was the only clear Ground there was. All the rest was in it's natural State of Wilderness, covered with pitch-Pine Trees, and a thick under-growth of Shrubs interpersed with Brakes, both Waste-high.

9. The Form in which our Men were placed, when the Action begun, and in which they remained during it's whole Continuance, only as they might somewhat alter their Posture while loading their Muskets.

10. The Breast-work Gen. Johnson speaks of in his Letter ; which was nothing more than the Bodies of Trees laid singly on the Ground. They were hastily fell'd while our Men were retreating from the former Battle, and not in Number sufficient to lie all of them contiguous to each other. The under-growth also was all cleared away about the Camp ; for which Reason, the Enemy were better defended than we were.

11. Three heavy Cannon in the Front, which did not do the Execution we should have been glad of, while the Regulars were together ; and afterwards they were, in a Manner, useless : Nor were they discharged more than 4 or 5 Times.

12. The Field-Piece on the Eminence mentioned by General Johnson in his Letter ; and not fired more than once or twice.

13. A long large wind-fallen Tree, upon a rising Spot of Ground, within 18 Rods of our Breast-work, behind which a number of Indians posted themselves, and did us Mischief.

14. The Manner in which a great Number of the Enemy (chiefly Indians) ran naked, [for it is their Manner to Fight without any other covering than a Flap over those Parts it is decent should be concealed] in order to reach a Swamp on our Right Wing ; where, having posted themselves, they were under Advantage to do us Damage ; and from hence it was we received most hurt.

15. A Ridge of Land, 15 Rods distant from our Men, behind which some Hundreds of

of the Enemy (mostly Indians) covered themselves; not being obliged to discover more than the Tops of their Heads, and not these, only when they were about to Fire. Here also was a wind-fallen Tree, which added to their Safety.

16. Col. Titcomb, and Lieut. Barron, that they might fire at the Enemy with greater advantage, got behind this large Tree; tho' at a Rod's Distance from the Breast-work; And here it was they both unhappily fell; being insensibly flank'd by some of the Enemy.

17. The Guards, as placed about the Camp, consisting of more than 500 Men. This lessened the Number of those who were in Action; bringing it down to about 1500.

18. Wet swampy Land, not at all cleared on our right Wing, which gave the Enemy great Advantage.

19. Two Gullies, which, together with the swampy Land within the Camp, occasioned the Tents of the several Regiments to be placed in the form they are here represented, however irregular, or inconvenient.

20. Cannon pointed all the Ways in which the Enemy could attack us, with a Number of Men to make use of them. Here was the Place where we kept our Powder, Shot, Shells, &c.

21. Waggon's placed so as to be a kind of Battery to the Guard and Cannon about our Powder, &c.

22. Our Magazine of Powder.

25. Two Mortars, from the smallest of which two Shells were thrown into the Swamp on our right Wing, suppos'd to be full of Indians.

29. A Log-house, in which the Prisoners were kept till they were sent to Albany.

30. The Mohawks running to the Breast-work to join our Men, who were now, and had for some Time been, in Action. The Reason why they did not join them at first was this; ---when they retreated from the first Battle, they went to their Camp, beyond the Swamp on our right Wing, to take Care of the Squaws and Children they had brought with them; and having conducted them to the safest Place, which took some Time, they then hastened in the Form here represented to join the Army in the Fight.

39. Officers, who appear very few in Number; because so mixed with the private Men, while in Action, as to be undistinguished from them.

The Third or last Engagement between a Party of our Men, and a greater Party of the Enemy, I have not represented to the Eye; but the History of it is, in brief, this, ---They heard at Fort Lyman, between 9 and 10 o'Clock, the Noise of a Multitude of Guns; and, as it continued without Interruption, they judged our Army at the Camp was attacked by a large Body of French and Indians: Upon which it was tho't proper to detach between 2 and 300 Men to their Assistance. This Detachment consisted partly of Parkers, but mostly of New-Hampshire Troops, and was put under the Command of Capt. Ginnis and Capt. Folsom. They arrived between 4 and 5 o'Clock at the Place where the French encamped the Night before, which which was near the Place where the Fight began in the Morning ; and here they discovered about 500 of the Enemy (chiefly Indians,) who had fled from the Battle at the Camp : Upon which they fell upon them, drove them from the Encampment, and pursued them till the Evening came on, making a considerable Slaughter among them. Our Loss was small ; but, by all Accounts, an Hundred of the Enemy were killed. Our Men loaded themselves with their Packs, and left great Numbers behind that they could not carry away ; which were bro't in the next Day, with as much Ammunition, Provisions, and other Plunder, as filled 4 or 5 Waggon. Their Flight was so hasty, that they drop't some of the Scalps of our Men, which we recovered.

Upon the whole, The Day of this Action, the 8th of September, may well be recorded in the New-England Annals, as one of our most memorable Days. The greatest Battle was now fought, and the greatest Victory obtain'd, that we can yet tell of. The Number of the Enemy is tho't to have been between 2 and 3000. Our Number, inclusive of Indians is known to have been about 2250 : Tho' it ought to be remembered here, not more than 1500 English were in Action at the Camp, (the rest being employed as Guards) which, with the Indians, will fall short of 1800. The wounded on our Side are 94 English, about 12 Indians ; the missing, 61 ; the killed 126 English, and about 20 Indians. Among our Slain are two Colonels, one Major, about 12 Captains and 2 or 3 Lieutenants. How many of the Enemy were wounded, or missing, we can't tell ; but we have abundant Reason to think 700 of them at least were killed. This we collect partly from the Numbers of their Dead we found within a few Days ; partly, from the Numbers (50 in one Place) we have since found that were concealed ; partly, from the Scores of Biers we have found in a bloody Hue ; partly, from the offensive Stench which has been smelt in all Places within 6 or 7 Miles of the Camp ; and partly also, from the dead Bodies our Scouts have found in many Places, even as far as Crown-Point. The French General is a Prisoner in our Hands ; and from him, with the other Prisoners, we learn, that most of their Officers were slain ; in particular, their Major-General ; and St. Pierre, the chief Commander of the Indians.

I shall only say, I heartily wish our Troops, in spite of all Difficulties, may yet proceed on the projected Expedition against Fort-Fredrick ; tho' the Season is far advanced ; and if they should, I shall expect soon to hear it is in English Hands.

As to the Plan I have given of Hudson's River ; it is partly designed for the Direction of Navigation, and partly to convey a more plain Idea of the Difficulty of the Carriage from Albany to Lake-George, to which Difficulty it is principally ascribed that our Army has not, as yet, been able to proceed any further on the intended Expedition.

The River is navigable from New-York to Albany ; And tho' the Tide flows as far as the Mouth of the Mohawk's River, it does not set or run up, further than the Flats, in Summer Season ; that is, not more than about 6 Miles from Albany. 'Tis observable, The Time of High-Water at the aforesaid Flats and New-York, is one and the same ; the it is dead low Water at that Time at Sopus, which is half Way from New-York to said Flats ; The occasion whereof is the Length of the River. As I have given two Scales ; one for the Length, and another for the Breadth of the River, with a Compass ; any Person, acquainted with the Names of the Places here mentioned, may very easily, without being at the Charge of a Pilot, proceed from the former to the latter of these Cities, by attending to the Marks here laid down for his Direction : In order whereto, it is to be noted, the pricked Line stands for the Channel ; the dotted Places for Shoals or Flats that will take up any common-Sloop ; and the Mark +++ for sunken Rocks. The first Flat or Shoal is at Tappaansee, the second at the Glass-House at New-Winfor, &c. On the East Side of the River, River, against the House of Mr. Martin Hoffman, is as difficult a Flat as any. The Channel here shoots first to the East and then to the West, &c. After you have got past Kenderbook, if you incline to the East Side of the Islands, you must give the Point a Birth, and you will find 11 or 12 Feet of Water for Miles together and a sandy Bottom. Keep the Middle of the River till you come up with the westernmost Island, where the pricked Channel meets; keep this Island close a-board for near 20 Rods, then bare over to the East Side gradually, as the Channel will shew itself if you observe the Current; for there is the upper Overflow, or Reef of Sand, at high Water 6 Feet Depth, or more, every common Tide. As to the West Side of the three Islands, I have given it as near the Truth as I could by the Description I had from the Pilot, not passing that Way my self.

The River from Albany to Lyman's Fort has such a Multitude of torn Falls, and Reefs, and is so extremely rapid in its Motion, especially in these Places, that it was with infinite Difficulty our Men could get the Battoes, as filled with Stores, to the Carrying-Place. Many Hundreds of them were employed in this Business. It took them much Time, and immense Labour. They were obliged to be so often, and so long, in the Water to force them along, that many of them fell Sick, and others became so infirm as to be capable of little Service. Instead therefore of conveying our Provisions and Stores any more by Water, it is done from Albany by Land. The pricked Line from Albany to Lake George represents the Waggon Road in which all our Stores are carried. This Road you may observe, crosses the three Branches the Mohawks River divides itself into, each Branch being about 30 Rods Wide, and yet fordable, at least in the Summer Season, not being more than 20 Inches, or at most 2 Feet deep. The Road in general, the whole Way from Albany to Lake George is plain and easy, with but few Hills, and these not high and difficult; and tho' it crosses the River at Saratoga, this is easily done in Summer, as the Water then does not exceed three Feet in Depth, or half a Foot more at the largest Allowance.

As to Fort-Lyman, (now call'd Fort-Edward) of which I have given a Plan, it is planted upon the Edge of the Bank of Hudson's River, so as that the River serves instead of a Trench upon the Western Side, its Bank being near 30 Feet in height from the Water, very steep. In like manner the small Brook pointed out in the Plan, serves the same End on the South Side, its Bank being equally steep and high, tho' the Stream is small.— Thus the Fort, being planted in the Crotch that is formed by the River and Brook, is advantageously situated, and impregably defended on these two Sides, with the help of only a little Labour and Art.

I have only to add, That I've receiv'd from a Friend a Sketch of Fort William Henry, which is not as yet completed: This Fort is built at Lake George, and is equally defended as Fort Edward; being planted in the Crotch of Land form'd by the Lake and the Brook that empties itself into said Lake. The Banks are somewhat higher than those at Fort Edward, and equally steep. On the Westernmost Part of this Fort is a Mountain near two Miles from the Fort to the top of it: This Mountain being very steep and high, the Enemy can receive no Advantage from it, unless they can look from the Top into our Fort; but as the Trees are very thick, it will in a great Measure prevent their taking a proper View thereof. As the Dimensions of this Fort is in Figures on every Angle, I shall only mention the Height and Thickness of its Walls which are as follows, The Foundation 32 Feet thick; the Parapets, 16 Feet Thick, and is 12 or 14 Feet high, where it is finished: It's built of Pine Logs, and filled up with Earth; and somewhat larger than Fort Edward, and is supposed (if well mann'd) able to withstand all Canada.
